How to Fill a Church.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 23.

THE DAY STARTS gloriously on western desert lands. It is the last morning of a trip across the continent, only three nights by train from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

The sun, rising as the train curves, almost due south, on its way out of Arizona into California at Needles, is on your left, and before you see it, the full flood of its powerful morning light rushes through an opening in the mountains, painting the floor of the desert a bright gold.

Above the earth is dull twilight, while the ground is flooded with brilliant sunshine. Swinnerton, or some other who knows the desert, should paint that.

EARLY IN THE night a bright moon lit up the desert, and the struggling vegetation with silver light. No matter how many times you see the moonlight, and the bright gold of a rising sun, on the desert, you come back to it, although there is no money to be made there, and perhaps not a soda fountain or moving picture within fifty miles.

YESTERDAY, AT Raton, just across the border that separates Colorado from New Mexico, an interesting group was awaiting the train's arrival. Mr. B. B. Naylor, who brought beautiful flowers, came to say that good times or bad make little difference when you have New Mexico sunshine all the time.

An intelligent, earnest high school teacher brought her class in journalism, 19 young men and women, to ask advice about newspaper work.

It would please you to see those young people, who live in a glorious climate, 6,600 feet above sea level. If the girls had worn rouge on their faces, which they did not, the artificial coloring would have been dimmed by the natural brightness of their cheeks.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE were told that the English language is to a newspaper worker what tools are to a carpenter. You must have the tools and know how to use them, and you must think, and have something to say.

The young people were advised to read the best English prose, not modern, study the history of the world, especially the history of ideas. The teacher was advised to have her students learn much good prose and poetry by heart. The young people exclaimed in unison:

"Oh, don't tell her that."

In that group of 19 there should be at least two or three first class writers and one good editor. A good editor is one who interprets their own thoughts for his readers.

FRANCIS (TWO-GUN) CROWLEY, an undersized, anemic boy, who passed his twentieth birthday in the death house at Sing Sing prison, was killed in the electric chair on Thursday night. It is as well for him that he is out of the world, and as well for the world, that gave him a poor chance.

According to his lawyer, Crowley's mother was a servant girl, his father a private watchman who never married the mother. He adopted the name under which he was known and put to death.

He was taught that a gunman killer was a fine personage and man's noblest act was to "shoot it out" if occasion arose. When police cornered him in a New York tenement, he shot it out while his ammunition lasted. Then a heavy electric current shot the life out of him.

PERHAPS IN our civilization, it is better, as it certainly is easier, to kill a rattlesnake than reform it. Undoubtedly the killing of murderers through the centuries has helped the process of natural selection, survival of those fittest to live.

However, civilization need not boast of the fact that the only thing it can do with such a man as "Two-Gun" Crowley is to shoot the life out of him, electrically, as he shot the life out of others.

THE LEARNED Dr. Millikan, of California, discoverer of cosmic rays, that constantly bombard us, suggests work for churches. Says the scientist:

"When men's stomachs are full they have intellectual and moral wants which have not been satisfied or even realized."

Dr. Millikan thinks the American church might satisfy those wants. Unfortunately with too many of us, when our stomachs are full and we have a little money in the bank, the world seems about all right. Intellectual hunger does not worry us.

PUT SIR OLIVER LODGE, Prof. Millikan and Prof. Einstein, lecturing on their specialties, in one hall, and Mrs. Judd, on trial for the "trunk murders" in another hall, and see which will draw the crowd.

Filling a church is not easy. One great London preacher, Spurgeon, to arouse interest had to climb down the outside of his pulpit to show how sinners go down to hell.

Dr. Talmadge, in Brooklyn, raced up and down the long platform, on which he preached, with terrific energy, and Henry Ward Beecher, greatest of modern preachers, found it necessary to sell a mulatto slave girl at public auction in Plymouth Church to arouse interest in slavery.

The human mind, only 12,000 years from the stone age, is dull. A prize fight, a murder trial, a horse race? Yes. In-

HAWKS FLIES NORTH FOR RECORD

Seeks Speed Mark in Hop to Vancouver From Mexico, Trip Linking 3 Nations

OAKLAND, Cal., Jan. 23.—(AP.)—Capt. Frank Hawks, attempting a record round trip speed flight from Agua Caliente, Mexico, to Vancouver, Canada, and return, landed here today, refueled, and took off exactly 10 minutes later for Portland, Ore.

Customs officials here gave him clearance. Hawks planned to proceed to Portland, Ore., for another brief stop. He expects to refuel at the same cities on the journey back from Vancouver.

Capt. Hawks

After spending the night in San Diego, Cal., Hawks sped to Agua Caliente, 15 miles distant, for a momentary stop, and within seven minutes of his first take-off he had passed over San Diego again, enroute here.

There has been no round-trip three-flag speed attempt completed over the route Hawks took today. Six weeks ago Jimmy Weddell, youthful New Orleans aviator, brought a plane he built to the West to attempt one. He set a record of 6 hours and 42¼ minutes in flying to Vancouver, but upon arriving there decided against trying the return flight.

Pulling down a stack of bread and pies from the counter on the head of a would-be robber, James J. Campbell, manager of a chain store at 586 Brushton avenue, today eluded the armed holdup man and ran from the store.

The robber, tripping several times as he too, ran from the place, escaped without obtaining any money.

Woman Asks 'New Deal' in Faro Swindle

MRS. MYRTLE T. BLACKLIDGE

Politician Asks If She Now Wants $150,000 For Bridge

CHICAGO, Jan. 23.—(AP.)—Mrs. Myrtle Tanner Blacklidge, former collector of internal revenue, initiated court action yesterday "for a new deal" in the Springfield (Ill.) faro game more than a year ago in which she reported she was swindled of $50,000.

She filed praecipe of a suit for $150,000 damages against Edward R. Litsinger, Republican leader and once a candidate for Mayor, from whom she borrowed the $50,000 taken from her, she said, by card sharps.

The praecipe contained no details, but she said she would charge Litsinger with libel because of statements he issued shortly after the faro game swindle became public, a year ago today. She said:

"I'm looking for a new deal. If I win the suit I'll re-enter politics. If I lose, I'm out of public life forever."

Litsinger's law office issued this formal statement:

"A year ago, Mrs. Blacklidge asked for $50,000. She afterwards claimed it was for a faro game. Now she asks for $150,000. She flatters me. I wonder if this is pinochle or contract bridge."

Bellevue Children Not To Lose Bank Funds

Bellevue school children, who had more than $35,000 on deposit in a special school savings fund, will not suffer through the closing of the Citizens Trust Company of Bellevue, the depository, a Common Pleas Court decision assured them today.

Judge Frank P. Patterson refused to allow the State Banking Department to withdraw from the Diamond National Bank bonds placed there by the now closed Citizens Trust Company of Bellevue to protect $35,000 deposited by Bellevue school children.

State Secretary of Banking William D. Gordon, through George F. Taylor, Jr., his deputy here, had entered suit against the Bellevue School Board demanding the return of the bonds, which he charged were illegally posted by the Bellevue bank.

Judge Patterson said:

"We cannot permit disposition of the matter to pass without comment upon the carelessness of both bank directors and officials and trustees of the school children's funds in failing to provide security as to which there could be no shadow of doubt.

"They threatened childish sacrifice with futility and a thrift lesson with defeat, the effect of which might reach far into the future lives of the children concerned."

ACCUSED CLERK ARRESTED AT STATION

Sleuths Balk Move of Bunting to Leave State; Flight Attempt Denied

Apprehended as he was being taken in a wheel chair to a Pennsylvania Railroad train, Harry Bunting, former chief clerk in the County Delinquent Tax Collector's office, who is charged with the embezzlement of $18,000 of county funds, was being held in county jail today on a District Attorney's detainer.

Bunting, because of illness, had been permitted to remain at his home following disclosure of the shortage. Receiving an anonymous tip late last night that the man was preparing to "make a journey" county detectives were assigned to watch the Bunting home. The arrest followed.

Warden John McNeil said Bunting told him veterans had offered to take him to a hospital, but that he didn't know where it was and had no intention of purposely leaving the jurisdiction of the court.

Bunting left his home in East Liberty in a taxicab in company with his son and John Collins of the United States Veterans Bureau. Collins said he was taking Bunting to the Marine Hospital at Brooklyn for medical treatment.

After leaving East Liberty, Bunting and his companions, taxied to the home of Howard Lehman, of 1666 McFarland road, Dormont, where Bunting formerly lived. The party then continued to the Pennsylvania Station.

International News Service.

ERIE, Pa., Jan. 23.—Reginald F. (Pete) Bowen, University of Pittsburgh athletic star, and two companions today were absolved of all connection with a chain store robbery for which they were arrested early this morning.

"There was no charge made against any of them and they have been completed, absolved of any connection with the crime."

OLYMPIC ATHLETE

Bowen was a member of the United States track team in the last Olympic game and has made several exhibition tours through Europe. His track and swimming records still are unbroken at Pitt.

The trio who robbed the chain store, smashed in a door and were leaving with a quantity of cigarets and the cash register when sighted.

They dropped their loot and fled, and have not been apprehended.

CONGRESS SPEEDS OPERATION OF CREDIT CORPORATION

HOOVER CHEERS BUSINESS BY SIGNATURE

House Rushes $500,000,000 Appropriation; Democrats To Be Named Directors

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23 (AP).—The bright light of confidence was cast today upon American business by the existence of full legal status of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, set up to stop deflation and free business and industry for normal activity.

The [illegible] which created the two billion dollar government [illegible] speech became law last night as President Hoover signed it. A few hours earlier Congress had given final approval.

FUND MEASURE UP

The required funds and completion of the directorate today were before the House which took up for immediate passage the $500,000,000 appropriation so it could be sent to the Senate for action Monday. After a late night conference with Democratic leaders President Hoover prepared nominations to fill the several boards of the corporation.

Charles G. Dawes already has been named president and Eugene Meyer, chairman of the board. Secretary Mellon and Paul Bestor, Farm Loan Commissioner, are ex-officio members under the law. Three Democrats remain to be named as a bi-partisan board is required. Harvey C. Couch, public utility man of Pine Bluff, Ark., was understood to be one of the choices.

LEADERS IN ACCORD

From the White House conference it developed the Democratic leaders were in full understanding with Mr. Hoover and the nominations would come today.

Upon signing the President issued a concise statement on the corporation's purpose. He emphasized the project was not an aid to big industries or big banks but to the great number of smaller ones. The big corporations, he maintained, can take care of themselves.

The corporation should be at work early next week with the half billion from the Treasury in hand, and with power to raise three times that much by the issuance of government-backed securities. This will go out in loans to railroads, banks and other financial institutions holding good securities not now salable and to agriculture.

BOARDS HEADED BY STEVENSON

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 23.—(AP).—The National Association of Real Estate Boards yesterday voted to urge Congress to take immediate action on the federal home loan bank system bill now pending in Congress. The association voted to appoint a committee on housing problems to co-operate with President Hoover's conference on home building.

The association installed Lawrence T. Stevenson, Pittsburgh, as president, succeeding Harry S. Kissell, Springfield, O.

In assuming office, Stevenson said:

"In reference to policy at this time, the entire efforts of the National Association of Real Estate Boards will be given to the federal mortgage bank bill which now is pending in Congress. I feel the scope of activities of the national association should be centered on passage of this bill, and until this problem is settled we will not endeavor to take up any new projects. We have several new features that will come in a practical way to members in due time."

William E. Best, Pittsburgh, president of the United States Building and Loan League yesterday told the association that building and loan organizations of the country are supporting the new home loan bank bill which, he said, will make additional refinancing credit available to the home owner.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—(INS.)—A sales tax on electricity was suggested to the House Ways and Means Committee today by Representative Crisp (Dem.) of Georgia. 'Jiggs' and 'Maggie' in N. Y. Pulpit Tomorrow Night

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—(Universal.)—Jiggs and Maggie, those hilarious creatures of George McManus who don't quite always typify the most peaceful sort of domestic bliss, will get downright sentimental and promise never to quarrel again when they celebrate their twentieth wedding anniversary Sunday night.

In the Broadway Temple Methodist Episcopal Church, One Hundred Seventy-fourth street, the cartoonist creator of Jiggs and Maggie, with his easel, will occupy the pulpit of the Rev. Dr. Christian F. Reisner at the evening service.

Dr. Reisner, taking a lesson from the little squabbles of Jiggs and Maggie, will preach on "Funmakers Needed." But McManus, the twentieth anniversary of whose famous comic strip will be widely celebrated next week, will manage the real wedding anniversary observance.

McManus will illustrate his talk with sketches of his characters.

In all of the newspapers carrying the "Bringing Up Father" cartoon including tomorrow's Pittsburgh Sunday Sun-Telegraph, there will be a special page in colors created by McManus with the "china" wedding as the subject.

AUTO LEADERS FIGHT U. S. TAX

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—(INS.)—Confidently preparing for one of the greatest business drives in history, the nation's leading automobile manufacturers today appealed to Congress to clear their path by denying the Treasury's recommendation for a heavy tax on their product.

Virtually all of the leading figures in the industry descended on the House Ways and Means Committee, holding hearings on a tax increase bill.

The manufacturers are a unit in opposing the Treasury's plan for a 5 per cent tax on new passenger cars, 3 per cent on trucks and 2½ per cent on accessories.

While the automobile spokesmen were opposing the Treasury's plan to raise $920,000,000 in new taxes, fresh criticism came from other sources.

Representative Crisp (Dem.), of Georgia, member of the committee, announced that he would seek to substitute new sources of taxation for the miscellaneous taxes urged by the Treasury, such as a tax on bank checks and admissions.

NURSE TO TELL KISS STORY IN JUDD TRIAL

Crowds Battle to Hear State's Claim Jealousy Caused Trunk Slayings

By ARTHUR L. MAREK
International News Service.

PHOENIX, Ariz., Jan. 23.—A fateful kiss, bestowed upon Agnes Leroi by "Happy Jack" Halloran, which the prosecution contends threw Winnie Ruth Judd, murder defendant, into a jealous rage, was expected to be described today as the state prepared to show a motive for the "double trunk slaying" of Agnes Anne Leroi and Hedvig Samuelson.

Lucille Moore, pretty nurse, who witnessed the incident, may be called as "surprise witness." The prosecution already has announced that it would show that a strained relation existed between Mrs. Judd and her two friends, Mrs. Leroi, X-ray technician, and Hedvig Samuelson, invalid school teacher, for a period of five weeks preceding the dual killings.

Crowds battled to get into the court room where Mrs. Judd is being tried for the murder of Mrs. Leroi.

'KISS OF FATE'

Miss Moore, in previous statements to County Attorney Lloyd J. Andrews, told of the kiss of fate.

Miss Moore was introduced to Halloran by Mrs. Judd on the evening before the killings. After the introduction, the three drove in Halloran's automobile to the bungalow home of Miss Samuelson and Mrs. Leroi. They were to pick up two of Halloran's "playboy" friends and go to Mrs. Judd's apartment for dinner and cocktails.

When they reached the Leroi-Samuelson home, Miss Moore has related, Mrs. Judd asked Halloran not to tell either of her women friends that she was out in the car. Halloran was to have dashed inside and returned with his friends.

Instead, he returned with Mrs. Leroi. This upset Mrs. Judd, according to Miss Moore's statement.

JEALOUSY HINTED

As they took their leave, Halloran kissed Mrs. Leroi, which seemed to anger Mrs. Judd, according to Miss Moore.

On the way to her apartment, Mrs. Judd chided Halloran about the kissing episode, Miss Moore related.

Whether Halloran, wealthy Phoenix lumberman, would be called to relate the fantastic life of the three women who enjoyed the patronage and friendship of rich men in desert cocktail parties remained problematical.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—(INS.)—The Prince and Princess Rospigliosi arrived here this morning from Italy on the S. S. MISS HELEN WALSH AT SING SING'S DOORS . . . TURNED AWAY

CHEAP FUNERAL FOR CROWLEY

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—(INS.)—"Funerals, $150," reads the sign in the window of the funeral parlor where today lay the body of Francis (Two-Gun) Crowley, "bad man" executed at 20 for killing Patrolman Frederick Hirsch, of the Nassau County police.

His foster-mother, Mrs. Anna Crowley, claimed his body at Sing Sing prison after he was put to death in the electric chair. She arranged to have him buried today in Calvary Cemetery.

She announced funeral rites would be held in the Church of St. Francis de Sales prior to interment, but priests at the church said no preparations had been made for them as yet.

A thousand persons surged about the undertaking establishment in efforts to view the body of the executed youth, but all were denied admittance.

Among the many flowers received was a huge cross of roses and lilies, inscribed "To a Little Pal."

FIND DRY LOANS IN CLOSED BANK

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 23.—(INS.)—Anti-Saloon Leagues, of various states obtained $11,256 in loans without collateral from the defunct Bank of Westerville County, Westerville, O., an inventory on file here today showed. SPORTSMEN RAP PINCHOT

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Gov. Gifford Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, was severely criticized last night by almost 500 Western Pennsylvania sportsmen who met at the Chamber of Commerce Building to hear the report of the committee investigating the charge that the Governor was dictating the administration of the State Game Commission.

The huntsmen declared the game commission was free of politics before Gov. Pinchot took office the first time. When Gov. John Fisher succeeded him, they assert, politics were dismissed, but have been resumed again.

The recent fuss wherein five Commissioners resigned as a protest to the acts of the chief executive brought the matter to a climax. A committee consisting of Colin Reed, president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Sportsmen's Associations, and Charles R. Hobson, president of the Allegheny County Sportsmen's League, went to Harrisburg to study the situation.

Last night they made an extensive report. The meeting then went on record as approving the former Game Commissioners' action in resigning as a protest against "political dictation."

3 Killed in Polish Coal Field Rioting

WARSAW, Jan. 23.—(INS.)—Clashes occurred throughout the Polish coal fields today as workers protested against an announced wage cut of 21 per cent.

PINCHOT URGES FIVE BILLION JOB LOAN

Opposition of Hoover to Direct Relief Declared Putting Money Before Men

Universal Service.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 23.—President Hoover's opposition to direct federal aid to the unemployed was denounced here last night by Gov. Gifford Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, as a policy of putting money before men.

In demanding immediate federal relief, Pinchot urged the prompt enactment of the Hearst $5,000,000,000 public works program, embodied in the La Follette bill and the La Follette-Costigan bill for direct aid to the hungry.

Speaking before the conference on governmental responsibility for unemployment, the Pennsylvanian deplored the inability of administration leaders to think of the economic upheaval in terms of human misery.

'MONEY-BLINDED'

Pinchot said:

"They are money-minded and money-blinded. Their sole aim has been to revive business. Money first and men afterwards. Apparently human beings can, so far as they are concerned, go hang—or go starve.

"Here is the indictment of an administration which refuses to sanction the appropriation of a single dollar to help the millions of men, women and children who are in actual physical distress."

Pinchot made it plain that he was hopeful of an early business revival and expressed the earnest hope that the Reconstruction Corporation would help in that direction. But meanwhile, he insisted that human suffering must be relieved.

Social Workers Here Urge Aid by U. S.

Social workers today, some with reservations, agreed that federal aid is a necessity to aid the jobless and provide for thousands of Pittsburgh families now in straitened circumstances.

With the Department of Labor in Harrisburg estimating the unemployed of Allegheny County at more than 160,000, welfare agencies, which last month recorded 24,000 applications for aid, are swamped with a daily increase. The new demand, social workers said, is for families that had not previously requested aid.

Frank R. Phillips, unemployment relief chairman in Pittsburgh, was quoted last night as having denied a statement to President Hoover that Pittsburgh "will be able to take care of its unemployment problem without federal aid." The original statement caused a storm of vigorous protests by Pittsburgh social agencies, who rebuked Mr. Phillips. In his reported denial Mr. Phillips claimed he was misquoted by a Washington correspondent.

POOR HEADS PARING BUDGET

The Poor Directors will probably revise their budget and modify their demand for an increase of 1½ mills in the 1932 tax levy when they appear for a final hearing before the County Commissioners Monday.

At a session yesterday before the Commissioners they agreed to defer building of a $130,000 contagious disease ward building and make other revisions of their 1932 requests which may preclude the necessity of increasing the millage.

Prior to hearing them the Commissioners passed a resolution providing for setting up of $500,000 from the general fund to provide for employment of citizens of Allegheny County by the Commissioners or their agents. This met with the spirit of the request made last week by a group of leading business men and financiers that the county appropriate $500,000 to the Allegheny County Emergency Relief Association.

INTERESTING TO the world, especially to Italy, is the fact that Vesuvius, for the first time in centuries, is dark. Always there has been a glow of light, caused by molten lava, at the top of the volcano.

The other night, after one or two earth shocks and loud rumbling, the light suddenly disappeared. Vesuvius is now as dark as one of the extinct volcanoes on Azores or out here in these western deserts.

The world wonders whether Vesuvius has decided to become an extinct volcano, and it worries about the possibility that the natural outlet of the volcano has been stopped up by earthquake. That might mean a sudden, unpleasant bursting forth in another place.

THE SPANISH republic, having won through its own revolution, now deals with another revolution in Catalonia.

That distressful country is to Spain's government what Ireland was for so long to the government of Great Britain.

Always dissatisfied, always singing the Catalonian song "Weep, Weep Catalonia," the Catalonian rebels decide they want a Soviet republic like that of Russia and are endeavoring to establish it.

IN THIS HAPPIER republic we also have our little troubles, and are about to launch a "capital reconstruction finance corporation," to see, with two thousand million dollars, what can be done to make us all more cheerful.

The President requests five hundred millions as a starter. Railroads will be helped, as they should be. Banks that have not run their business successfully will be helped.

Farmers will get something, not very much. Corporations, if they can give security approved by Mr. Dawes, may get almost any amount. The idea is to start business going, like putting gasoline into an automobile, or priming a dry pump with water.

GAMBLING LINKED IN SLAYING OF PHILA. CHURCH WORKER

ASSASSINATION OF ROTHSTEIN RECALLED

Poker Playing of Victim, Stained Cap Only Clues In Mysterious Knifing

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 23.—Not so long ago, Arnold Rothstein, one of the underworld rajahs of Broadway, sat in a card game wherein the sky was the roof. Shortly after this gathering of gambling spirits, Rothstein, who never went to church, was assassinated.

Police guessed the motive for the slaying arose from the gaming table—but nobody ever found out who did it.

Only a few days ago, Norman Bechtel, model young church worker, was just as mysteriously knifed to death for some unknown reason.

Bechtel, despite his religious convictions, also loved to gamble, International News Service learned today.

VICTIM A GAMBLER

The youthful leader of activities in the Mennonite Church loved nothing better than a crisp game of poker. He frequently entertained a group of men in his bachelor apartment for a session at the "great American game." The stakes were not so moderate.

Bechtel, at times, was prone to display a thick roll of bills, which he had won at one of these games, police were informed. His uncle reported that his nephew often carried several hundred dollars on his person but assumed it was money he had collected as treasurer of one of the church organizations.

Was there any connection between the high-stake poker games staged by Bechtel and the finding of his slashed body in Germantown with its 11 knife wounds?

POLICE BAFFLED

Police were guessing at everything as they stared in vain at the wall of sheer mystery which surrounded the killing of young Bechtel.

Vengeance? The grim quirk of a maniac? Robbery? Take your choice . . . the police have no preference.

The leading development, aside from the revelation of Bechtel's fondness for gambling, was the discovery of a chauffeur's cap, stained with spots which may be blood, found near the spot where the body of Bechtel was discovered on an untenanted estate in Germantown.

A careful analysis was undertaken to determine if the marks on the cap were mud or blood. The cap was found by a policeman and a detective searching the area.

There is now a marked high centered over the plateau section, which spreads over the entire country to the central plains. This distribution of pressure is causing cloudy weather over most of the eastern half of the country and rain over the central valleys over the West the weather is mostly clear. Temperature changes were slight since yesterday. Mild weather continues east of the Mississippi and cold weather over the West. There will be a change to colder weather over this section tonight and freezing weather may be expected by Monday afternoon.

LOW FUNDS MAY CLOSE MANY HOSPITALS

Surgeons Meet to Discuss Crisis; State Funds of Institutions Here Assailed

While legality of appropriations to state-aid hopitals was under fire in Harrisburg, members of the American College of Surgeons gathering here for their hospital conference Monday pictured closing of many such institutions as imminent unless the public comes to their rescue.

Suit filed yesterday in Dauphin County Court by the Constitution Defense League, names several hospitals in this district as among those which have "not clearly established their right to classification among non-sectarian hospitals."

Those mentioned are the Ohio Valley General Hospital, McKees Rocks, given $24,000 in the 1931 budget; Pittsburgh Hospital, $58,200; Presbyterian Hospital, $65,000; Providence Hospital, Beaver County, $11,000, and St. John's General Hospital, $47,300.

Dr. Malcolm T. MacEachern, of Chicago, director of hospital activities of the American College of Surgeons, here arranging for the conference to be held Monday and Tuesday in the William Penn Hotel, today said the crisis facing many hospitals because of present conditions, will be one of the principal subjects discussed.

He said:

"Widespread unemployment has caused many persons to put off necessary medical treatment, and many others who required immediate emergency care have had to go into the free wards. As a result most hospitals have lost a good deal of revenue. Some are faced with the prospect of closing their doors, unless the public comes to their rescue."

Pittsburgh has 19 hospitals approved by the College of Surgeons, Dr. MacEachern said.

DEADLOCK SEEN IN HONOLULU DEATH QUIZ

Grand Jury Suspends Massie Case Inquiry to Tuesday; Question Victim's Mother

International News Service.

HONOLULU, T. H., Jan. 23.—Without explanation, the territorial grand jury today had suspended its inquiry into the Massie murder case until Tuesday.

The jury had not finished examining witnesses in the case in which Mrs. Granville Fortescue, eastern society leader; her son-in-law, Lieut. Thomas H. Massie, of the United States Navy, and two naval enlisted men, E. J. Lord and Albert Jones, are charged with killing Joseph Kahahawai, one of five natives suspected of attacking Lieut. Massie's wife.

Mrs. Hannah Kahahawai, mother of the slain native, was one of the last witnesses interrogated by the jury.

VERDICT DOUBTED

A report indicated the jury already had become hopelessly deadlocked over the question of applying "the unwritten law" to the four murder defendants.

County Attorney James Gilliland already had declared the four defendants never would be convicted or acquitted of the murder, because of the present frenzied mixed sentiment in the islands.

Twice Territorial Judge Albert Cristy and Deputy City Prosecutor Griffith Wight were called into consultation by the grand jurymen.

Meanwhile, Honolulu's law enforcement program moved rapidly toward completion in the territorial legislature. The House passed the Senate's anti-loitering bill.

WILL SELECT CHIEF

Gov. Lawrence M. Judd signed the measure passed by Senate and House to have the Governor name a board of five commissioners to appoint a police chief. The chief of police at present is elected.

Gov. Judd at once appointed the commissioners, who were to meet today to name a chief of police.

David Lyman, 22, escaped convict accused of attacking a Japanese woman, remained at liberty. He escaped from Oahu prison with Luis Kaikapu, a convicted murderer, New Year's Eve. Kaikapu was recaptured after he had attacked an American woman.

MINERS ACCEPT 10 PER CENT PAY CUT

Fagan Announces Action To Aid Terminal Firm Battle Non-Union Group

Union miners employed by the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation will go to work February 1 under a 10 per cent wage cut, following conferences held the last two weeks by union officials and the mine workers' scale committee with executives of the coal corporation. P. T. Fagan, president of District No. 5, United Mine Workers of America, announced late yesterday.

The action was ratified by an overwhelming majority when submitted to the local unions affected, Fagan said. Several thousand miners, working part-time at Coverdale, Castle Shannon, Bruceton, Avella and Mollenauer, will be affected by the new wage levels, it was said.

CONFERENCE SLATED

Conferences will be held every 90 days to consider possible changes in the wage scale, according to an agreement between the union and Terminal corporation.

Fagan declared that "cut-throat competitive practices" of non-union operators, slashing wages and consequently prices, are eliminating union operators from the country's markets, and aggravating unemployment conditions among miners of the Pittsburgh district.

He charged that nonunion operators, taking advantage of the present economic situation, have, in addition to reducing tonnage and day labor rates, been resorting to the practice of depriving the mine workers of their honest weight and denying them the right to employ a check-weighman of their own choice.

IMPROVEMENT SEEN

He said:

"We believe these conditions can be overcome, the industry stabilized, wages increased, conditions of labor improved and the lot of the operator made profitable by a complete recognition of the principles of collective bargaining and the establishment of uniform wage scales throughout the entire Pittsburgh district."

All phases of the prevailing conditions, according to Fagan, were considered by the scale committee of 30 mine employes of the Terminal Corporation and union and corporation officials in modifying the existing wage agreement.

HILL SHOOTING CLUE SOUGHT

Detectives and police today continued their investigation into the shooting up of four business establishments in the Hill and East End districts early yesterday. They said they were without a clue as to the identity of the men who raked the buildings with shotgun slugs as they drove by in automobiles.

The five suspects arrested near Passavant Hospital were fined $2 or two days to jail after police testified they could not connect them with the shooting. None of the owners of the various establishments were able to throw any light on the affair, police said.

Owners of the establishments were Frank Burello, poolroom proprietor, of 551 Larimer avenue; Patsy Melarango, whose places at 1000 Webster avenue and 1029 Webster avenue were damaged by slugs, and Frank Cassilli, 1027 Webster avenue.

Pettruny's application was denied September 18, 1931, because of the crime, after which he presented a petition to the court.

In his petition Pettruny said that while residing in Masontown, Fayette County, in 1915, he had received threats and that on his way to a bank to deposit $175, he was attacked by eight men, and after being knocked down, he shot and fatally wounded one of his assailants. Chatham Village is open for inspection.

Twenty-nine just completed modern homes, the first of 125 to be ready for occupancy by May 1 in a garden bower atop Mt. Washington, were thrown open for public scrutiny today.

Five have been furnished in the latest and most up-to-date manner by four downtown department stores. They contain everything of convenience and comfort for the middle class home.

Built by the Buhl Foundation as "an experiment and a demonstration in the housing of tomorrow," the village is a thing of beauty inside and out.

From any angle of the visitor's approach he is met with a trim neatness found in few except the most exclusive residential districts. The grounds are attractively laid out.

Furnishings on display within the five model homes are trim, comfortable and economical. The five stores have brought varying tastes to bear in the selection of furniture. Of particular interest are Kaufmann's dining room; McCreery's living room; Boggs and Buhl's nursery and Joseph Horne's master bedroom and dinette.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

In Mayfair
—With—
Patricia Pitt

Ever-active society plans new surprises every day, until I feel like little Jack Horner who pulled out the plum, except that I turn magician and pull out three "plums" for your amazement today. First there is the engagement of Sarah Graham Dennison, daughter of Mrs. Agnes Johnston Dennison, of Evaline street, East End, to Dr. Adolphus Koenig, Jr., son of Dr. Adolph Koenig, of West Swissvale avenue, Edgewood, to announce. And then before I tell you about another wedding of interest, I want to say a word about an interesting exhibit.

Mrs. Elizabeth Adams Pickering, of Morewood avenue, is having a loaned exhibit in her home of seventeenth and eighteenth century textiles, and old English silver, a very lovely collection. The exhibit opened day before yesterday, and will continue for about two weeks.

And the other wedding is of interest here, because a member of the bridal party will be Elizabeth Reilly Hart, daughter of the John Joseph Harts, of Emerson street. The wedding is that of Helen Beaudrias, her cousin, daughter of the Isadore Jean Beaudriases, of Greytower, Yonkers, to Dr. John Lawrence Riker, of New York, and will take place on Saturday, January 30, at 4:30 o'clock in the Beaudrias home.

Mrs. William D. Murray, sister of the bride-elect, is to be the matron of honor, and in addition to Elizabeth the bridesmaids will include Mary Steers and Catherine Hayes, of New York. William C. Riker, brother-in-law of the bridegroom-elect, will serve as best man, and ushers will be Samuel Riker, Jr., Samuel Sloan Walker, Wendel Davis, George Cramer, Dr. E. P. Roland Richards, all of New York; Frederick Alexander, Jr., of Greenwich, Conn.; Jerome Beaudrias, brother of the bride-elect, and Donald C. Gates and Edward Bradford, of Boston.

There will be a reception after the ceremony, after which Dr. Riker and his bride will leave on a wedding trip. They will reside in Park avenue.

WHITE SATIN EVENING FROCKS FAVORED FOR EARLY SPRING

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Jan. 23.—The evening scene of the Southern mode is set against drapes of white satin. For this material has definitely established its leadership not only for wear in the lovely American winter resorts, but also for Riviera wear. Which means no doubt that it will be a strong favorite for spring wear. It is wonderfully becoming, but of course like most of the worthwhile fashions is meant for the slim of form. Many a woman, quite satisfied with her figure, has had a shock when she surveyed herself garbed in white satin. And the wise woman immediately takes steps to adapt herself to the mode, if the mode cannot be adapted to her particular type. But to wrap ourselves in white satin again. This material has been very deftly handled by the designer Long, fine clinging lines, back interest through the medium of the decolletage and bustle-like bows, loops and choux is cleverly attained, and the model manages to be a gala frock and yet retain the lovely simplicity that should mark the frock of white satin.

* * *

INVEST IN A GOOD model of this type and you will find yourself looking forward to every occasion at which it may be worn. And for more reasons than one. For a well-groomed woman in a fine white satin frock invariably arouses that grand mixture of admiration and envy that is the desire of most of us to obtain from our fellow-men and women.

* * *

CHANEL USES white satin and drapes it most cleverly in this lovely evening model, made for southern wear. Diagonally about the hips she places a wide sash of the satin and draws it up with a frilly "chou" at the side. Narrow scarves of the material are attached at the shoulders and may be knotted across the front of the back according to choice. A wide shirred panel is set in at the right side of the skirt at the base of the draped sash. The rest of the skirt has a moderate, circular flare.

Children Go in for Mr. Hyde And Grownups Flock To See 'Skippy'

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1932, by King Features Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 23.

Hollywood's campaign to bring the children back into the theaters reached a strange climax today in a statement made to me by B. P. Shulberg, managing director of production at the Paramount studios.

"Last year we turned out pictures like 'Skippy' and 'Sooky,'" said Mr. Shulberg, "and now we find the children flocking to see psychoanalytical 'Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde' and Macabre 'Frankenstein.'

"It seems we made a mistake in assuming that children are interested in stories about children. The adults were the ones who took up 'Skippy.' Children like grown-up screen fare.

Jackie Cooper

"In fact, I'm almost ready to believe we have no children today. I have a 9-year-old, and I tried him out on books I liked when I was 8, books such as the Henty series. He thought they were nonsense.

"I suppose it's part of the fast-moving age we live in. Our children achieve an early sophistication. We may as well admit it."

The result of this discovery is that Paramount will make no more children's stories this year. They already have let out Jackie Searle and Mitzi Green and Jackie Cooper has, I believe, only one more picture on his contract. Little Robert Coogan still is with the company, but there is talk of putting him in casts with adults.

MOVIE GOSSIP

The film colony is much excited over Gene Dennis, the mental marvel. Executives and stars are consulting her, and are amazed at her uncanny answers. Even big timers like Louis B. Mayer have listened with interest.

Barry Norton is back in Hollywood many pounds lighter after an exile in Tahiti. When he left Hollywood he was threatened by baldness. Away from curious eyes on his island retreat, he shaved his head and kept it shaved for several months, now he has a shock of new hair and is looking fine.

Barry Norton

Martin Flavin, the playwright, has returned after a six months' absence and has taken Colleen Moore's home in Belair. It is one of the show places of the film colony, boasting a guest bungalow, swimming pool and a motion picture theater. While away, Flavin completed a new play, "Peas Porridge." He'll take up his screen writing again at Paramount.

John Darrow developed blood-poisoning while vacationing at Lake Arrowhead, and had to be flown to Los Angeles in a special plane. He is much better now.

Saw Paramount's two foreign sensations, Marlene Dietrich and Sari Maritza lunching only a few tables away from each other. Marlene, of course, was accompanied by Josef van Sternberg. Jack Gilbert stole the show on the Barney Glazer-Sharon Lynn wedding party to Yuma. The citizens of this western Gretna Green nearly mobbed Jack. After the ceremony was over, Sharon and Barney re-enacted it for the news photographers. Mickey Neilan directed the scene.

Humanity on The Go in Stanley

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

Confusion is dramatized in the Stanley's new show and it proves good entertainment. On the screen the confusion of a railroad station is present in "Union Depot." On the stage is the confusion of Big Top days, with Ringmaster Fred Bradna presenting a lot of circus acts.

"Union Depot" is an episode of humanity on the go. It is hello, goodby and a great rush for the trains. And, as in real life, a quiet observer would like to shout to all those people: "Why all the rush? There'll be other trains tomorrow."

YOUNG HOBO IN IT

But after all, maybe tomorrow would be too late! It wouldn't be for the young hobo playing at being a gentleman. Not for Scrap Iron, his vagabond pal. They're not going anywhere. But it might be for the stranded chorus girl who wants to get to Salt Lake City—and for the counterfeiter with government men on his trail.

And for some in this picture, even today is too late. They should have gotten trains yesterday, last month or last year. Anyway, the film has much of life. It is as if the movie men set up their cameras in our own Pennsylvania Station and, with sly exaggeration, ferreted out a maze of everyday drama.

CAST DOES VERY WELL

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Joan Blondell head a cast that does very well—very well, indeed.

The circus on the stage has the bareback-riding lady, the wire walker, the lion-tamer, the trapeze artists, the trained seals, the performing elephants, the balking mule, and ever so many other things. The band comes parading down the aisles from the rear of the auditorium, and then someone opens the asylum door and a flock of clowns scurries forth.

Buy yourself a bag of peanuts and go and see the show.

MUSIC

Guy Maier

Carnegie Music Hall

During the Music Lovers' Hour, sponsored by the Pittsburgh Orchestra Association, Guy Maier gave a musical journey yesterday afternoon in Carnegie Music Hall. It is gratifying to see the increased attendance during these matinees.

Mr. Lissfelt

Mr. Maier is a very clever entertainer. He has always impressed me so rather than as an artist when he played with his partner Pattison, and yesterday he proved the contention more than ever. His clowning is irresistible, true enough, good entertainment for children and some of us adults as well, but I question seriously whether he gave the audience any really serious musical thought.

As an introduction the lecturer plays a group of Mozart piano music, that we may become acquainted with the man before we journey with him from Wasserburg to Vienna. Then with well-chosen lantern slides we learn more of Mozart's wanderings, while Mr. Maier relates a rather joyous excursion following in more modern fashion Mozart's diligence.

The last part of the program was devoted to Debussy's "Toy Chest." Presenting the themes of this ballet together with some very amusing illustrations in colored slides and a chatter as naive as in "Alice" Mr. Maier proved himself the children's friend and a real innovator.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

LONDON, Jan. 23.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

See where Congress passed a $2,000,000,000 bill to relieve bankers' mistakes and loan to new industries. You can always count on us helping those who have lost part of their fortune, but our whole history records nary a case where the loan was for the man who had absolutely nothing. Our theory is to help those who can get along even if they don't get it. Yours, WILL.

Night Club

You'll call for me when all the Park is gay
And gold with light, and sweet with lilac bloom.
A bell will echo through an empty room.
"He does not answer," someone's voice will say.

I shall have checked my garment at a door
Shuttered and dark, as custom recommends;
But once within, the faces of old friends
Will greet me, as I cross the shining floor.

And there'll be wine and welcome, tales to tell,
Music, meat, and laughter, with the far
Faint glimmer of an unremembered star
To mark that little World we loved so well.

And I shall have a table laid for two
Where I may sit content and wait for you.

Repartee

It happened at an RKO theater the other performance. Mac Benoff decided to heckle a vaudeville ham. At first the player didn't seem to mind Mac's barbs, but the audience appeared to be amused at Mac's cruelty, so the actor lost his temper and snapped:

"Ladies and gentlemen, that fellow in the box is a nut. I get paid to tell you gags, but this fellow, who seems to be better than I am, is doing it for nothing!"

"Which just goes to show you," flipped the heckler, "what a cockeyed world we live in!"

Catch On?

A drunk was getting out of the cab at his door, when he slipped and sprained his hip. He went into the bathroom to strap it with adhesive, but being unable to see his injury, was was forced to use the mirror. The next morning he greeted his wife, but she refused to talk to him.

"Drunk again last night, eh?" she said. "You good for nothing, leave me alone."

"Why, darling," he said, "I was cold sober. What makes you think I was blotto?"

"Well," yipped the frau, "if you weren't tight, then what the devil's the idea of covering the mirror with adhesive tape?"

Oop!

Times being what they are, Tom Weatherly, the producer, spent a fortnight serving on a jury. During the case the attorney for the defense began to browbeat a mild-mannered little witness.

"Now, sir," he thundered, "tell us how far away you were when the collision occurred."

The meek witness first cleared his throat in the nervous manner and replied:

"I was 10 yards 2 feet and 9 inches from the scene of the accident."

"Really?" sneered the lawyer. "And how come you happen to be so exact, my friend?"

"Well," was the retort lovely, "I knew some fool would ask me that question so I measured the distance."

The Morning Mail

"Dear Walter: In a recent column you stated that 'Russell Ryder, who wasn't Santa Claus after all, wears better tailored Sing Sing apparel than all the others.' Ryder may not have been Santa Claus on Broadway, I wouldn't know about that because I didn't know Ryder in those days, nor have I ever known Broadway. Just for the sake of the records, however, I can tell you that Russell Ryder is something of a Santa Claus in Sing Sing these days.

"Aside from being largely responsible for securing the various shows and vaudeville entertainments that have been presented at the institution recently, he spends PLENTY of his own money in buying cigarets, newspapers and other minor luxuries for destitute fellow students who wouldn't have them otherwise. Another thing, it seems that in prison, as in the Army, you can wear anything you want just so long as the clothing conforms with regulations. Ryder, I imagine, happens to be one of the few inmates who cares about such trivial things as clean shirts, neckties and well-pressed trousers. Regardless of his Broadway record, I can tell you that he is making a mighty fine showing at Ossining.

"Maybe I am wrong, but it seems to me that it's guys like that phony producer whose flop show left Broadway only a week ago that dangle imaginary jobs before young and stage-struck girls that should be in cages up the river instead of a lot of gents that happen to be occupying them now."—William Fields."

On the Firing Line

At a recent Broadway failure, a play in which a man was burned at the stake, the creditors gathered for a final payoff. In the words of Charlie Washburn, "it was the first flop of the season to go up in a blaze of glory."

In on a Pass, Too!

A bartender fainted at the opening of "Black Tower," a mystery thriller. The management saw a first rate story in the incident and summoned the reporters.

"This is what the play does to 'em," cried Benny Stein, the producer. "Call the newspapermen. It's page one news."

And then the barkeep came to.

"Tell the boys what stirring incident in the play caused you to collapse," cried Stein.

"I'm sorry sir," moaned the ailing fellow, "but the show had nothing to do with it. I was drinking my own stuff all afternoon.

Add Tough Luck Tales

J. E. Reizen, tsin of Iowa City, Iowa, and his wife have only one idea of a good time. They save their money all year, then come to New York for a few weeks for a bang up bust—theaters, night clubs, etc.

The past year they placed their savings in three banks in Iowa City, so it would be safe. A few weeks before their New York trip all three banks closed. But that didn't discourage the Reizensteins. They took their bank deposit books, went to the one remaining bank in Iowa City, borrowed enough on their bank books and came to New York, anyway.

The first night they were in New York, they went to the theater—and on the way in Mr. Reizenstein's pocket was picked!

Life in Reno Featured In Film

By MARGARET RUSSELL

America's matrimonial wrecks' mecca is brought right to Pittsburgh's front door this week at the Warner, with pert Bert Wheeler and goggle-eyed Robert Woolsey as Wattles and Swift, two Reno-vating cut-rate divorce lawyers.

In "Peach O' Reno" all court proceedings are broadcast over Station GIN, the breath of Reno; the judge cracks walnuts with his mallet, the jury eats peanuts and turns into an orchestra at the fade-out, and at night time law offices transform themselves into a casino where divorcees and co-respondents tread on light fantastic hoof.

Wheeler does a Julian Eltinge to avoid being shot by an outraged husband with two guns and a sombrero. The story centers around a middle-aged couple who quarrel on their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. Both apply to Wattles and Swift, and complications ensue. The judge, jury, plaintiff and defendant are reduced to tears by Swift's eloquence, with a violin accompaniment by Wattles. The couple reunite. And everybody's happy.

An S. S. Van Dine creeper, "The Symphony Murder Mystery;" a short picture dealing with "The Unemployed Ghost," a Boop-oop-a-doop Talkartoon, and Fox Movietone News complete the program.

Veteran Stage Actress To Try Movies

Louise Carter, veteran stage actress, who had never dreamed of a motion picture career, obtained one of the four leading roles in Paramount's "The Man I Killed," without lifting a finger.

Ernst Lubitsch, director, after a week's futile search for the exact type he had in mind for the mother part in the picture, heard that Miss Carter was vacationing in Northern California, invited her to make a test, and two hours after it was completed notified executives that she was the player he wanted.

Akron Sails In Hearst News

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Remarkable pictures of the dirigible Akron, largest airship in the world, mooring at sea to a mast of the Patoka, anchored off the Virginia Capes, is vividly presented in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, now being seen in the Penn, Fulton and other theaters. The successful experiment was all the more difficult because of the fact that it was made at dawn, with searchlight signals flashing instructions. There is a graphic description of the unusual event by the Globe Trotter.

Mrs. Hattie W. Carraway, of Arkansas, the first woman to be elected to the United States Senate, poses for Hearst Metrotone News on the steps of the Capitol in Washington.

DOG RACES

The dog racing season is on in Florida. The track at Miami Beach was opened with plenty of swank and there are pictures of the fleet greyhounds chasing the ever elusive rabbit.

From Paris come impressive pictures of the funeral of Gen. Pau, comrade of Foch and Joffre, who goes to his final rest in the Invalides. Thousands of persons pack the sidewalks.

So fearful have the storms been in Yellowstone Park that elk are trooping down the mountains by the hundreds to the hay depots that have been provided by the Government to keep them from starvation. In a beautiful snow covered valley, 350 of the animals are shown arriving at one time.

OPERA, FIRE AND WAR

Hearst Metrotone News was privileged to record scenes from the last act of the testimonial performance of "The Flying Dutchman" at the great opera house in Hanover, Germany.

The only fire brigade on skis rushes from headquarters in the little village of Riesengebirge in the Bavarian Alps, to battle a blaze in a mountain dwelling. All the apparatus is on runners drawn by horses.

There is no peace in Bali. The half savage tribes in this Dutch Indies district engage in a thrilling battle with bamboo sticks.

Here Are Some Non-Essentials For U. S. to Tax

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

Favorite indoor sport in Congress is figuring out luxurious thingamajiggers to tax.

We'll give the boys a list that will save them yards of trouble:

The extra handle on loving cups.

Sneeze powders at weddings.

Swallow tails on diplomats' pajamas.

Mahathma Gandhi's tailor bill.

Pictures of Einstein listening to another guy lecture.

The bottles they use at launchings. If it's water, tax 'em. If it's champagne, fine 'em.

Shoulder straps on debutantes' gowns, they're always down around their elbows.

The feathers they used to put on Eugenie hats.

And the ladders that Pullman porters can't find when you want to climb into your upper berth.

Gloria Wins Contract In Met

By GEORGE SEIBEL

At last the methods employed by the Metropolitan Opera to snare European artists are unmasked. Gloria Swanson's new picture, "Tonight or Never," reveals now it is done. The scout or impresario spots his songbird, then he walks up and down before her hotel in Venice, leaving a heap of half-smoked cigarettes under her window. Then he lets her get the idea that he is a notorious gigolo, which haunts her until she visits him in his hotel, wearing the most gorgeous of the eight gowns she wears tonight or never.

George Seibel

When he gives her the choice of love "tonight or never," she considers that "never" is a very long word—and next afternoon she sings "Tosca" so marvelously that she does not regret the emerald necklace she has left with him and gets a Metropolitan contract right off the reel. After she has torn up the contract because she loves him more than fame, she finds out she can get another contract, and she already has her emeralds back, and no doubt she will sing "Tosca" next season.

This rather puerile concoction with piffling dialogue has the illustrious names of Vajda and Belasco attached to it. About the best thing in the production is the settings designed by Willi Pogany. Gloria's eight gowns also have snap and sparkle.

In the stage show there is a very fine juggler, named Joseph Blank, and a capital comedian, Fred Lightner, who is a brother of the blithe Winnie. His "presents for public men" were most amusing. There's also fine dancing by everybody and Harry Hochle with his cat's-eye orchestra play the "Poet and Peasant" overture in total darkness. They couldn't play it better with a billion watts of electric juice.

Tallulah Bankhead Has Adventure Film

Tallulah Bankhead will begin her Hollywood starring career in Paramount's film version of Thomas Rourke's adventure novel, "Thunder Below." Paul Lukas will appear opposite Miss Bankhead and Richard Wallace will direct.

George Fawcett, veteran character actor of the screen, comes to the Enright today for a three-day appearance in person.

Lang Plans Repair Of Duquesne Ramp

Public Works Director Edward G. Lang today was outlining plans for the repair of the Duquesne ramp, authorized by City Council at a meeting this week.

The repairs will cost $30,000, of which amount $5,000 will be contributed by the Pittsburgh Railways Company. The department's action, according to Lang, will put the ramp in good condition for at least seven years. Work is expected to start within a week or two, Lang said.

Stage Hero Murdered In Film

By MILDRED FILLMORE

Mystery stalks in a backstage setting in "The Deceiver," new picture in both the Davis and the Enright. For melodrama of this type, it is quite above the average.

About half of the picture is consumed with paving the way for a good murder. The other half is alloted to solving the crime, with another murder shoved in for good measure.

Practically all of the action takes place in a theater, most of it on stage and backstage. It centers around the great star of "Othello," who is quite the matinee idol in makeup, but rather a rotter in his true self.

He has more enemies than a stage has footlights and so you're not surprised when the lights finally go out for him. Jealous rivals, angry husbands, disgruntled press agents and disappointed ladies are all about him. But we're not going to tell you who "pops" him off!

The cast features Ian Keith, Dorothy Sebastian, Lloyd Hughes and numerous other individuals who fit into their parts satisfactorily.

TELL IT TO SALLY -:- -:- Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day -:- -:- By SALLY MARTIN

Which Sex Is Wisest With Domestic Pocketbook?

Should the missis be the general manager; or should the mister?

Which'll you vote for—and why?

Missis Simmons is voting for wives at the helm, and she has plenty of arguments to back her up—so she thinks.

I wonder if you'll agree with her.

"Dear Miss Martin:

"Will you give me some advice; you or some of the rest of the gang—the wives who read this column?

"My husband and I have been having quite a few arguments lately about who should run things in our home.

"He thinks the husband should (he would, being a husband and a man!) And that is just exactly his argument, too. He keeps telling me that the man makes the money, and that he should have all the say about how it is spent.

"Of course, he isn't mean about it. He is generous and good to me, but I don't think much of some of his arguments about the masculine right to manage everything in sight.

"He claims that women 'haven't had experienced with management' like men have; and particularly means me, because we have been married for 15 years, all of which I have spent at home, while of course he has been out in the world bucking all sorts of kinks and difficulties, managing his business and generally running things in his own line.

MANAGED WELL

"Well! I can tell you right now that some of those 15 years were pretty lean, and if I hadn't been a good manager with my home, things would have been pretty severe for both of us. I didn't have a very big allowance to spend (he didn't have much to give) but I made it go round for him and me and the three children, and none of us failed to get a fair share of what there was. So I think I've had a good deal of experience, even if I wasn't 'out in the world.'

"And I think that women are generally better managers than men, anyway. They can make money go farther.

"I'll admit that men seem to know more about making money than the average woman does; but when it comes to saving it and spending it wisely, I think that women have it all over them.

WANTS OPINIONS

"So I think that I am right, and I should manage the family finances, but he won't let me. He insists that he must do it—that he must be "boss."

"That idea simply burns me up. It always has. I didn't say much in our earlier years, because most wives had to accept that sort of thing then. My mother always did. But I think it is wrong, and I'd like to hear from some of the other women—and men, too, for that matter.

"ALICE SIMMONS."

Well, there's the question. What's your answer?

Do you think that women are better at saving, and spending wisely, than men?

Who spends the money in your family, and how does it work out?

Does your husband insist on spending it, and does he spend more than you would?

Is your wife extravagant? Do you think you could get more for your money if you, and not she, did the spending?

Come on! Give us the low-down!

"AS ALWAYS"

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

"Ever Yours. Just around the corner. Yours faithfully. Ever thine!" Says Love, signing himself "YOURS" to the charming woman of every age. Wherever Araminta or Janice chanced to linger, gracing the scenery, had she looked out just an inch farther around the sill—as often she did!—there was Love—coyly willing to come out and begin matchmaking. She seems to have had more time to linger than Kay has today. Yet—

Kay leans against her modernistic curtains just long enough to ponder upon her career—and just around the corner, wistful, willing—is Love! The same Love that waited upon Araminta. Always there to begin a new love, to stage the first love, to black Fame's eye and put his nose out of joint and make him seem not worth the trying for, to Lovely Lady.

Careers, new clothes, real, honest sophistication, work, hurry, a certain deep doubt of Love surrounds today's lads-girl. But Love is just around the corner "as ever; ever yours; yours faithfully; ever thine; your obedient servant."

And I don't see that the marriage license bureau is closing up shop, due to modernism and the depression!

NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Serve the Guest First

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please put my mind at ease? Is it the correct thing for a maid, when serving at table, to serve her mistress before serving the guests? At home in England the host and hostess were served last, which was considered correct. Since living in the United States I have noticed the maid serves her mistress first and it struck me as being incorrect. Perhaps it is the custom to do that in this country, and I would appreciate it very much if you will let me hear from you.

WORRIED.

You are right . . . this is a difference in service between the United States and England or any continental country. Always, abroad, the guest of honor is served first.

When the service is really correctly carried out, this is done. But for some reason a great many American hostesses have drifted into the habit of having themselves served first. This really shouldn't be.

The excuse is often made, by hostesses who insist that they be served first, that this shows the guest how to serve herself, or himself, to the dish that is being passed. But foods are now so simple that this is really not necessary.

Twin's Graduation Cards

Dear Mrs. Beeckmann:

My sister and I are graduating from high school soon now and we would like to know what would be proper in regard to sending our announcements? The following ways have been suggested to us:

1. Send separate announcements with individual cards inclosed.

2. Inclosing two cards in one announcement.

3. Having a card engraved with both names to be inclosed in one announcement.

As we have a limited amount of money to spend on our announcements, we prefer to send one announcement with two cards.

Will you kindly let us know if this would be correct, or have you any other suggestions.

D and E (Twins).

Your own solution is by all means the best one, I think, and especially since you are twins. By all means enclose the two cards in the one announcement. And may I please send congratulations, too, and friendly greetings to the twins who are about to be graduated?

Contract Bridge -:- OFFICIAL SYSTEM As Adopted by Leading Authorities

By E. V. SHEPARD

Normal Two and Three Bids

Unless you thoroughly understand all bidding standards, it is a bit confusing to encounter in one club normal two bids, while another equally good club employs normal three bids. Both normal two bids and three bids cannot be employed by those who utilize the common two demand bid or who follow The Official System bidding. One or the other may be employed, but not both.

A normal opening bid of one of any suit expects partner to hold for an immediate assist either four small trumps, or at least three trumps including one high honor. Aside from such trump support his total assisting strength should be at least 2½ probable tricks—and more than that in case he assists wholly upon length of trumps and ability to ruff side suits. If the opening bidder wishes partner to assist upon less strength than above, an opening bid of more than one must be made. Therefore a normal opening bid of one denies the possession of seven reasonably certain tricks. This normal bid denies ability to win four-odd unless partner has better than three tricks.

Provided your hand requires little or no trump support from partner, particularly if your hand lacks strong defensive cards and strong support for a shift by partner, it is best to open with a game bid in case you require not more than two supporting tricks from partner to fulfill your contract. You should open with a declaration of 4-Hearts upon the first hand shown below. The second hand obligates an opening bid of 5-Diamonds.

♠A ♥KQJ10876 ♦3 ♣52
♠84 ♥KQ ♦9 ♣AKQ9854

A normal opening bid of one shows something short of 7 tricks. A normal opening bid for game shows in a major suit at least 8 tricks, or in a minor suit at least 9 tricks. Only some strategic purpose permits game bids upon less than the strength specified above.

The gap between strength calling for a normal opening bid of one and a game bid of a major suit is only a trifle more than one trick; it is only a little more than two tricks in case of a minor make. These small gaps between strength calling for an opening bid of one, and an opening game bid, are the only places where normal opening bids of either two or three may be applied. You do not require both normal opening bids of two and three.

Either one or the other bid may be employed normally; the one not needed for normal use may be utilized conventionally. Just this procedure is followed. The Official System employs normal opening bids of two, because they are quite commonly needed for this purpose. For conventional use, obligating partner's response, either an opening bid of 2-Clubs may be employed, to show three biddable suits, or an opening bid of three may be employed to announce possession of a big two-suiter that should go game at one or the other suits, or a powerful single suit having slam possibilities.

The player who uses an opening bid of two for showing strength, demanding partner's response, makes use of a normal three bid to show a weaker hand—one of insufficient strength to obligate partner to respond.

Practically every player makes use of forcing bids of some sort. The great majority of players use either the two bid for forcing or else use the three bid for forcing. Thus nearly every player has occasion to employ a normal opening bid of either two or three for non-forcing purposes.

Heart of a Wife -:- Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Mother Graham Insists on Watching Sick Child

From behind my mother-in-law's unconscious back, Lillian wrinkled her face at me, and made a gesture more befitting a street gamin than a grande dame such as she can be when she wishes. But it was no disrespect to an older woman which had prompted the action. She knew that Mother Graham's truculent entrance, with its threat of another obstacle to my plan of caring for my convalescent baby, would probably prove the last unsupportable note in the gamut of nerves which I had run during the last 12 hours, and she was endeavoring to save me in the only way possible, that of appealing to my sense of humor.

I am never able to resist her, and though I was not particularly amused, my resentment was halted, and I was able to meet my mother-in-law's strictures with a philosophy which would hardly have been possible without Lillian's signal.

"What is this all about?" my mother-in-law repeated stridently, and her militant pose emphasized her comment upon her entrance that we seemed to forget she was "still on earth."

"We're simply discussing the care of Faith during the next few hours," Katherine said smoothly. "Madge was so worn out this morning by her all night work over her play that both the physician and I forbade her to help take care of Faith when she was seized with the convulsion."

"I am fully aware of that, as I am of the fact that I was not notified of my granddaughter's severe illness until I awoke this morning," my mother-in-law said loftily. "I suppose I am old-fashioned, but I confess I cannot see why a baby's nearest relatives should be barred from its deathbed."

She was in her very best form, what Dicky calls the "martyr - tied - to - the - stake-pose." It is the one characteristic which makes it hard sometimes to remember what sterling qualities are hers; what a stanch friend in time of need, and how dear and lovable she can be. Curiously enough, it was the one thing needed to bring me back to sanity. I could see the absurdity, and the grotesquery of her attitude, but I also could see, clearly, how similar it was to the secret feeling of resentment which I had held against Katherine for keeping me from my baby's bedside, but which I had been saved from voicing.

"I gather," my mother-in-law went on after a pause in which no one of us, experienced in her little ways, dared to speak, "that you and I, Margaret, are now to be permitted to take care of our own child. Am I not right?" She whirled and faced Katherine with steady inquiring eyes.

"If you will be so good." Katherine's poise was perfect and her voice and manner were not deferential. "Madge has been kind enough to promise me 40 winks while she sits with Faith. I am counting upon Faith's staying asleep for the most of the afternoon, so that Madge can get that revision done before Mr. Veritzen arrives at 3 o'clock."

"Why will it be necessary for Margaret to spend any time at all in the nursery?" my mother-in-law asked caustically. "Fortunately, I belong to a generation which did not divide its interest in the way that you modern women do with your eternal compromise between your families and your professions. I never put anything above the care of my children and I flatter myself that I succeeded in bringing them to manhood and womanhood healthy in mind and body."

She was so complacent that I wondered if she had forgotten the distinctly unhealthy mind which had belonged to her daughter, Elizabeth, mother of the four Harrison children whose death not even her children had been able fittingly to mourn. But, of course, no one could ever be so cruel as to remind her of her dead daughter's shortcomings.

"I have nothing to do during the afternoons," she went on, "and I insist upon watching Faith while she sleeps. It would be impossible, Margaret, for you to give the child the proper supervision, and at the same time carry on any other work, as you are planning to do. You may sit in here with me, if you wish, you probably will not disturb the child; but the responsibility will be mine."

I tried hard to see the humorous aspect of her tirade with which I was sure Katherine and Lillian were regaling their risibles, but I had been too nerveracked to succeed in seeing anything humorous in the situation. The only thing I could visualize was that even this chance to watch over my baby was to be taken from me.

I felt choky, suffocated, and I gathered up all the strength I had to answer my mother-in-law in a way that would not offend her.

"How fortunate, mother, that you happened in just now!" I said sweetly, "and it is so dear of you to offer to take care of Faith. I know Katherine will rest securely with you in charge, and I shall be able to do my work without worrying, also. If you do not mind, I think I will not try to work in the nursery. It might disturb her and if you are there, there surely will be no need of anyone else."

My mother-in-law's head reared itself even higher than she was carrying it.

"I hope," she said with infinite scorn in her voice, "that I am qualified to watch a two-month-old baby while she sleeps, even if she is convalescent from a severe attack of illness. But I am wondering, Margaret, what your husband will say to your preferring your professional work to the care of your sick child."

How to Keep Well :-:

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

"Vaquez' Disease" Means Having Too Much Blood

About 50 years ago an eminent physician named Vaquez described a new and rare blood disease. The disease is now spoken of as "Vaquez' disease," but is also known as "polycythemia vera."

Dr. Copeland

We frequently hear of individuals having too little blood, but it is rare to learn of anyone having too much blood. In Vaquez' disease the afflicted person suffers from too much blood.

The disease is rare, but occurs in both males and females, and usually after the age of fifty. The cause of the disease has not yet been discovered. It is known to occur in families.

An individual suffering from this disease has unusual color in his face. The face is light red, and becomes bluish red upon exertion. This is a characteristic sign of the disease, though some cases have been reported where this sign was absent. Weakness and weariness, loss of weight, dizziness, noises in the ears, difficulty in breathing, nausea, indigestion and severe headaches are other classical symptoms found in this disorder.

The hands and feet frequently "fall asleep." This annoying sensation, associated with vague neuralgic pains, prevents necessary sleep and rest. The sleeplessness in these cases is difficult to cure until the underlying cause is recognized. Very often the hand is engorged with blood when held down, and becomes rapidly anemic when held up.

It would be difficult to recognize this disease by the few symptoms I have outlined, as these disturbances are present in many other ailments. These signs, however, are sufficient to suggest Vaquez' disease. The suspicion is easily and definitely confirmed by a laboratory examination of the blood.

In this condition the blood tests show that the blood is too rich in coloring matter and in the number of red and white blood cells.

Normally the blood should contain about three to three and a half million red blood cells per cubic millimeter of blood. In Vasquez' disease there are found from eight to fourteen million red blood cells. Two to three times the normal number of white blood cells are found in this ailment. The hemoglobin, which is the coloring matter of the blood, is found to be 100 per cent, whereas the normal percentage of hemoglobin is from 70 to 85 per cent.

At one time this disorder was considered a hopeless and fatal disease. It was first successfully treated in 1924. A specific drug was used in that year in the treatment of this rare disease, and it has since been used with extreme care and under medical supervision, since in excessive doses it produces a severe and fatal anemia.

Not so long ago blood letting was extensively practiced for the relief of this condition. This treatment is no longer given, as that relief is temporary and without permanent benefit.

Schoolgirl 'Crushes'

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

Ruth's mother is fearfully upset because Ruth has taken to fairly worshiping her English teacher. It wouldn't be so bad, Ruth's mother thinks, if it were someone her own age, but a gray-haired man! It savors of things unnatural and somewhat morbid. Ruth's mother rather shudders, as she tells of it in a low voice.

Yet it isn't so hard to understand, not so serious as the girl's mother thinks; and it will run itself out with a little parental help.

A little girl's first picture of the human male is her father, and for long years he composes all standards of comparison by which she judges boys and men.

When the little girl gets tall and becomes a high school student, she has matured spiritually and emotionally. That's where parents so often misjudge. They jump at the conclusion that at this age the daughter has advanced in development farther physically than emotionally, and that is usually a false premise upon which to begin.

The girl is beginning to be a woman, to be sure, but she is more concerned with ideals at this stage than with physical interests, except in unusually exceptional cases.

The young girl's mind, and nature and body are getting ready to choose a mate, and granting that the father is her first image of the male, she plants her dreams at the feet of a man who most nearly approximates her father in looks, manner and intellectual development.

Thus it is quite often an older male teacher who is the recipient of the girl's first crush, the object of her dreams and poems and pages in her diary.

But contact with boys of her own age, even though it shatters some of her illusions and fragile dreams, brings her at least down to earth—brings her to a point where she begins to reconcile the real with the ideal.

It is a situation which should be treated seriously, but minus the worry based upon suspicion. Dances, tennis games, parties, wholesome contact with boys of the adolescent's own age will cure this first dream love affair, with no negative results if the parents just sit tight and try to understand it.

Household Hints

Mint will keep fresh for some time if it is washed in cold water in which a little bicarbonate of soda has been dissolved.

Wine stains can be removed by holding the stained portion of the cloth in boiling milk. Mildew stains will disappear quickly if soaked in sour milk.

If you add a piece of lard the size of a walnut to the boiling water with which you make starch, it will prevent the iron sticking and impart an excellent gloss to your linen.

Save odd pieces of soap, tie them tightly in a piece of soft flannel and dip in boiling water until soft. Place in cold water until firm, remove flannel, and a ball of good soap ready for use is the result.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Here's the proper massage movement to fill out hollow cheeks: Anoint with a heavy cream, place thumbs and fingers outspread and claw. Pick up the main muscles and let 'em snap back. Follow with an ice ironing.

Eyebrow arching is no dummy's job. Good appearance depends upon the contour of the eyebrow, which should harmonize with the shape of the eye. Those narrow, smeary, little streaks, like whisps of black darning cotton, are entirely out of order. Old stuff.

By using a cream base and a paste rouge, there can be imparted to the complexion a synthetic blush that will defy detection. Working with oils mean that blending is more successful. The powder, of course, goes on atop the warpaint, acting as a subduing agent.

Buttermilk is good beauty food, so are raw vegetables. Orange juice taken before breakfast helps clear a sallow skin because it acts favorably upon the intestinal tract. Supplicants for good looks must drink six glasses of water a day. Very necessary.

In the time of good Queen Bess ladies used to take wine baths. Think of that! Which doesn't impress us very much, since even the most fastidious belles of that day had bugs in their hair. In the time of Marie Antoinette the business of making the toilet consisted of washing the hands and face with a few drops of eau de cologne. To the cosmetic-minded woman and the one who rejoices in the possession of a bathtub all her own, the compounding of soap was the greatest step forward made by civilization.

NICKEL NET UP IN FOURTH QUARTER

Estimates Indicate 1931 Profit of 20c Per Share, Meeting Present Dividend

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—Earnings of International Nickel Company of Canada for the three months ended December 31, 1931, probably will be slightly larger than in the three months ended September 30, 1931. Indication is that they will be between $800,000 and $900,000 after depreciation, depletion, interest and federal taxes, equivalent after preferred dividends to 2 cents or slightly more a share on the 14,584,025 shares of no-par common stock. This would compare with $645,970 net before preferred dividends in the September quarter and would indicate earnings for the year of 19 to 20 cents a share on the common stock, compared with 67 cents a share on the common in 1930.

USUAL WRITE-OFF

The last quarter earnings are after the usual write-off approximating $900,000 for depreciation and depletion, indicating that the company is able to continue the quarterly dividend of 5 cents a share on the common stock now being paid.

Foreign exchange fluctuations made it more difficult to estimate foreign earnings this year than in more normal years.

International Nickel Company is one of the few companies engaged in international trade whose main line of business showed improvement during the final 1931 quarter.

HAS TRADE CONFIDENCE

In 1929 International Nickel refused to advance the price of nickel and monel metal to its clients. With prices of other metals soaring, its customers felt that nickel must advance, and therefore began to over-book on their requirements. It was with the greatest difficulty that International Nickel was able by drawing upon broken ore in stopes, concentrates at the plants and its metal stocks, to meet the extraordinary demand. However as a result of the confidence that resulted in the stability of nickel prices, International Nickel has enjoyed a much better market for its products during the depression than have most metal companies.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

SANE OPTIMISM DISPLAYED BY FINANCIERS

California Bankers Look Forward in Few Months To Business Sunshine

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
(Universal Service)

SAN SIMEON, Cal., Jan. 23.—California's sunshine, far famed and real, is duplicated in the sanely optimistic remarks of her financiers.

Henry M. Robinson, chairman of the Security-First National, was able to tell his stockholders that if Americans mind their own business and take advantage of new machinery for combatting deflation we have a right to look for some business sunshine in the next few months. Mr. Robinson, an outstanding financial personality in Southern California, is a national figure because of his role as unofficial financial adviser of President Hoover.

Mr. Rukeyser.

BANKER HOPEFUL

Mr. Robinson's colleague, J. F. Sartori, president of the bank, reminds those who are lacking in faith that depressions often last a long time, saying:

"I have now been in the banking business in Southern California nearly 40 years, and during this time we have had five or six periods of depression comparable in many respects in intensity with the present one through which we have been passing and in every case not only locally but in the entire country, we have emerged to periods of greater prosperity and rapidly increasing values and a minimum of unemployment."

This is an appropriate time for bankers to talk, and to act, with reasonable qualified optimism. Our troubles are primarily financial, rather than industrial. The breakdown came from abuse of the bookkeeping side of business—not from the niggardliness of nature nor from any lack of technical efficiency in business.

SHOULD AID BANKS

If the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is to prove worthy of its hire it should give solvent bankers who have become absurdly liquid the courage to resume normal business risks and to return to their legitimate field of financing trade and industry.

Arthur Curtiss James, who showed his faith in the longer term future of the railroads by becoming perhaps the largest individual carrier stockholder, wisely points out that the carriers are suffering from lack of flexibility under existing railroad regulation. Railroad management lacks the facility of changing its rate and other policies swiftly in accordance with shifts in the business situation. Instead it must get permission of the Interstate Commerce Commission after long and tedious hearings. By the time the action has been approved it is likely to be too late. The commission should be reorganized so that it can render swift decisions in emergency situations.

STEEL DEMAND SHOWS STEADY GROWTH

Production Gaining at Rate Of Two Points Each Week; Prices Show Irregularity

By B. E. V. LUTY

Demand for steel is making consistent increases week by week from a wide variety of sources, no single consuming line being conspicuous. Ingot production has been rising about two points a week from the holiday low and has been at about 26 per cent in the week now ending. The pace if continued would make January end where December began.

A mild beginning of seasonal increase is indicated by the record, but orders are so small individually that no backlogs accumulate, and producers indulge in hopes rather than predictions as to the nearby future, having confidence simply that the low point was passed in December. Previously it had been thought that October would go down in history as marking that position.

AUTO OUTPUT SLOW

A still more favorable view of the railroad outlook is taken, indicating a little steel buying by the railroads in the next few months, against practically none at all in the last few months. The Erie Railroad's purchase of 31,377 tons of rails is the first regular buying of strictly seasonal character and seems to mark the inception of a buying movement postponed from the late months of the old year, the usual time. The major part of the Erie rails will be rolled at Edgar Thomson, beginning early next month. New York Central is expected in the market shortly.

Automobile production is still proceeding sluggishly, with Ford plans unknown and some other makers awaiting disclosures as to the new models. The industry is taking somewhat more steel than in December and still more than in October or November. Farm implement makers are maintaining the higher rate of the last three months, but continuance is uncertain.

Fabricated structural steel lettings reported this week showed a marked increase over the low rate of the last three months but prospects are not particularly promising, even public work being likely to be somewhat less active than was expected.

OUTLOOK BRIGHTER

No further declines of significance are noted in finished steel products but irregularities continue in several lines, which show no definite prospect of becoming stabilized as they were for several months up to a couple months ago. In bars, shapes and plates there is now a measure of stabilization, however, in that mills are again quoting $1.60 Pittsburgh and $1.70 Chicago after having covered customers at the recent decline. Semi-finished steel has yielded again after its December decline and is quotable at $27 to $28. Total declines since 1929 are materially less in semi-finished than in sheets and strips.

For the longer future of steel demand, expectations are that there will be gradual and more or less continuous improvement, in place of the familiar course of March showing a peak with subsequent declines to a low July. The theory is based on spring requirements being expressed sluggishly and of improvement in general business helping steel in the second quarter.

DEALERS PLAN KELVINATOR MEET HERE

Factory Officials to Detail Record 1932 Sales and Advertising Campaigns

According to officials of the Standard Talking Machine Company, distributor in this district for Kelvinator products, the annual dealer convention will be held in the William Penn Hotel, Monday, February 1. Approximately 225 dealers will attend the meeting.

J. F. Crossin, regional manager; H. W. Burritt, vice president in charge of sales, and A. M. Taylor, advertising director, all representing the Kelvinator factory, will be in attendance to assist in presenting Kelvinator lines of household and commercial electric refrigeration to the convention and unfold the details of the 1932 sales and advertising campaigns, the biggest ever scheduled in the history of the Kelvinator Corporation.

Mr. Taylor

Mr. Crossin

The Kelvinator factory will be literally brought to the field at this distributor - dealer convention through the showing of a movietone of its various manufacturing departments taken at the Detroit and Grand Rapids plants. The sound pictures are said to be the most costly and interesting industrial movies ever filmed.

The Kelvinator Corporation recently issued its financial statement for 1931, showing a continuation of the upward curve of success the company has enjoyed throughout the last two or three years of subnormal business conditions. Kelvinator Corporation officials view conditions in the refrigerator business with optimism, predicting that the current year will be the most successful in Kelvinator history.

MOTOR GLASS DEMAND UP

Renewed interest in plate glass on the part of automobile manufacturers was the bright spot of the week in the flat glass industry, according to the American Glass Review. As had been anticipated, automobile makers have started buying plate and laminated glass in larger quantities now that the automobile shows have indicated a good demand for cars. The demand for plate and laminated glass for use in automobiles has caused increased production schedules in several plants.

Generally, the first quarter of the year is one of heavy plate glass demand and production. While 1932 has started more slowly than recent years, there seems little doubt that the first quarter will be one of great activity as compared with the fourth quarter of 1931, which was extremely dull and saw plate glass production at its low for the year.

FIRM TO BUILD NEW PLANT

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—Continental Can Company, Inc., has recently purchased a factory site at Houston, Tex., comprising several acres of land in close proximity to the center of Houston.

The company's southwestern sales office was moved the first of the year from Dallas to Houston and as soon as practical plans will be formulated for the erection of a modern can-making plant on the acquired site.

Other major improvements recently completed or now in process include the remodeling of one of the Cincinnati plants and installation of new equipment, the erection of a warehouse at Jacksonville, Fla., the construction of a new three-story can-making plant at Harvey, La., and the purchase of the assets and business of the Gordon Can Company of Omaha, Neb., including a plant at that location.

National Steel Profit to Exceed $2 a Share

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

OUT OF ALL THE STEEL company earnings statements to be published in the coming two weeks, National Steel Corporation will make the only report which may be regarded as encouraging to the stockholders.

It is now known definitely that the predicted net profit of $2 a share or better was realized for 1931. The company earned $3,774,610 or $1.75 a share in the first nine months of the year. Net in the third quarter was $326,113 or 15 cents a share on the 2,156,832 shares of capital stock. Obviously the results for the fourth quarter were better than those of the third quarter since earnings of at least 25 cents a share would be needed to bring results for the year over the $2 level.

Dividend requirements of $2 a share were fully earned in 1931. Officials believe that the company will stand a good chance of earning its dividend requirements for the first quarter of the present year. This assumes that the volume of steel business will continue the gradual improvement now under way until March and takes into consideration various operating economies which were put into effect late in 1931. Factors in helping earnings in the fourth quarter were reductions in wages and salaries.

Results Better Than Average

WHILE THE RESULTS to be reported by the National Steel Corporation for 1931 will show a decline from 1930, the comparison will be far more favorable than for other steel companies. National was the only large steel company which earned dividend requirements last year and was the only one which did not reduce or omit its dividend.

Net income for 1930, the first year of the existence of the present corporation, was $8,415,822, which was equivalent to $3.91 a share. National was formed by the merger of Weirton Steel, Great Lakes Steel and the ore and blast furnace properties of the M. A. Hanna Company. Early in 1931 the Michigan Steel Company, with plants close to those of Great Lakes, was acquired.

Plants Recently Finished

FOLLOWING ITS FORMATION National Steel embarked on a $36,500,000 expansion program. The last units were placed into operation in July so that these improved facilities have only exerted an influence on recent earnings. Obviously under existing business conditions their contribution to earnings could not have been great so that the full benefits of this expansion will not be apparent until business shows definite evidence that it is getting back to a satisfactory level.

It has been learned definitely that there is no truth to the frequently circulated reports that E. T. Weir, chairman of the board of the National Steel Corporation, will become president of the United States Steel Corporation, succeeding James A. Farrell, who recently announced his resignation.

East Pittsburgh Shop Wins Award

The East Pittsburgh gas and electric shop of the Equitable Sales Company was awarded honorable mention in a nation-wide contest for its interior display of Frigidaire refrigerators. The contest was sponsored by the electric refrigeration bureau of the National Electric Light Association. The honorable mention accorded the local company was in the class for store interior displays of less than 200 square feet of floor area.

40 Nations Joined By 'Phone in 1931

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Developments in international telephone interconnections in the past year brought the telephone numbers of subscribers in 40 foreign countries into American subscribers' phone books, according to G. Stanley Shoup of the Commerce Department's transportation division. This means that every telephone subscriber in the United States is in contact with 32,750,000 other telephone users, or nearly 92 per cent of all the telephones in the world.

Concessions Made For Used Copper

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—Copper buying is small here and abroad. No pressure to sell is appearing on the market, but second-hand metal is again obtainable at appreciable concessions from first-hand prices.

Electrolytic for domestic shipment is nominally 7¼ to 7½ cents a pound delivered to the end of June and 7⅝ cents C. I. F. Hamburg, Havre and London.

RETAIL SALES RETARDED

There has been comparatively little change in the volume of business transacted by wholesalers and retailers, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review. Sales are still materially lower than normal and movement of seasonable wearing apparel is much restricted by the springlike weather prevailing nearly all of this month.

Construction work is still very light and lumber and other building materials are rather inactive. There has been but little change in the rate of operations of manufacturers of electrical equipment, production being materially lower than last year at this time. Collections still average slow with both wholesalers and retailers.

TONIGHT'S GAMES TO AFFECT RECORDS

WHILE THERE ARE no statistics available for the country at large, the outcome of two basketball games scheduled for tonight will affect the positions of three of the leading coaches of the collegiate realm, men whose records for the last eight or nine seasons have been consistently good. The three mentors whose standing will be affected by tonight's results are A. A. Schabinger, of Creighton University, who is to bring his Bluejays to Pittsburgh to meet the Panthers on February 20; Dr. George Koegan, of Notre Dame, and Dr. H. C. Carlson, of Pitt. The two games that will be watched with interest are those between Pitt and Notre Dame at South Bend, and between Creighton and Missouri on Creighton's home floor in Omaha.

Dr. H. C. Carlson

All three coaches started their careers in the season of 1922-23. At present Schabinger leads, his teams having won 128 games and lost 50, for a percentage of .719; Koegan is next with 141 wins and 56 losses for a percentage of .716, and Carlson is third with 133 victories and 54 defeats for a percentage of .711.

CARLSON CAN SQUEEZE ahead of Koegan by winning tonight, as the Pitt coach would then have a figure of .713 against the Notre Dame mentor's .712. On the other hand, Koegan, by beating Pitt, can pass Schabinger, provided the latter loses, with .719 to the Creighton man's .715.

Though Notre Dame is the favorite to win over the Panthers tonight, the Irish will have a mental hazard to overcome. For the last two seasons Pitt basketball teams have had the same Indian sign on the South Benders that the Notre Dame gridders have had on Jock Sutherland's elevens in football.

IN SEVEN GAMES played so far with the Carlson basketeers, the Irish have been able to win only twice. Last year, Koegan's passers seemingly had the game on ice, but Willie Kowallis made good on two fouls to tie the score, and then in the extra period the Panthers pulled away easily to win 28 to 20.

In the return game here Koegan profited by any mistakes he might have made at South Bend, and as a result his team had possession of the ball with a four-point lead and only a minute to go. But the next thing the Irish knew, the little Panthers had stolen the ball and Tim Lawry had caged two sensational shots to tie the score, the North Side lad's last shot going through just as the gun went off. Again Pitt won in the extra period, this time by a 35-32 margin.

IN DISCUSSING HIS plan to shift Rabbit Maranville to second base for the Braves this year, Manager Bill McKechnie pronounces the veteran the best keystone sacker he ever saw. "I was manager of the Pittsburgh club the year Maranville played second base, 1924," says McKechnie, "and I never at any other time in all my life saw such a brilliant game at that position as he put up there. He had it over Eddie Collins, Frankie Frisch and all the other great second sackers. For a time, at least, the Rabbit can stop the gap at second base on any man's ball club."*

Adolfo Luque

TWO MORE NOTABLE major league baseball careers probably have been closed by the action of the Brooklyn club in handing unconditional releases to Pitcher Adolfo Luque and Outfielder Rube Bressler, as it is unlikely that either of these old-timers will be picked up by any other outfit in the big show.

There are only two men older than Luque in the majors, these being Jack Quinn and Urban Faber. Dolf will be 42 on August 4, has been pitching since 1911 and in the National League since 1918. He led the league hurlers in 1923 with 27 games won and eight lost, a percentage of .771, the highest percentage since Bill James' .778 in 1914 with the lone exception of Dazzy Vance's .824 in 1924. The passing of Luque leaves Mike Gonzales, Cardinal coach and emergency catcher, as the only Cuban player in the majors. Alfonso Lopez, Luque's catcher in Brooklyn, who has been referred to as a Cuban, is a full-blooded Spaniard.

BRESSLER, NOW 37, was a southpaw pitcher for Connie Mack in 1914-15-16, but after entering the National League late in 1917 he was converted into an outfielder and first baseman on account of his batting ability.

Many righthand throwers hit from the left side of the plate, but Bressler was one of the few lefthand throwers to bat righthanded. A number of southpaw pitchers have been righthand stickers, including Wilbur Cooper, Eddie Karger, Larry French, Bill Hallahan, Bill Walker, Eppa Rixey, Jake May, Jumbo Elliott, Walter Stewart, Bud Teachout and others, but, except for Bressler, about the only prominent regular players who threw lefthanded and batted righthanded were Jimmy Ryan, the old Chicago outfielder, and Hal Chase.

AMERICAN LEAGUE DOPESTERS have about concluded that the A's need only two outfielders when Lefty Grove is pitching. The speedy southpaw seldom permits opposing batsmen to hit to left field. Perhaps it's because the enemy takes out some of its lefthand hitters when Grove is pitching and the righthand hitters swing late at his smoke ball, driving it to center or right. At any rate, in the 27 complete games Grove pitched last year Al Simmons and his understudies had only 34 putouts all told in left field, while the centerfielder had 76 and Bing Miller had 73 in right. In only four games pitched by Grove did Simmons have as many as three putouts, and in seven games he had none, whereas it was not unusual for the center or right fielder to have five or six.*

BILLY PETROLLE may never reach the welterweight fistic throne himself, but he's flagging a lot of other fighters headed in the same direction. There isn't much of a chance for any ambitious young welter to reach the goal as long as the Fargo Express is in the road as a barrier. He's poison to youthful championship ambitions.

First he exploded the boom of Justo Suarez, the Argentine sensation, with a nine-round knockout. Then he stopped Billy Townsend, the Vancouver Flash, and last night he turned back another so-called title possibility with a sixth-round kayo over Eddie Ran. The Polish battler carries a wallop of his own, but trading slams with Petrolle looks to be something on the order of Queensberry suicide.

EXTENDING A HELPING hand to the smaller boxing clubs in the Empire State, in response to a petition from them in a period of decreased gate receipts, the New York Boxing Commission has slashed the wages of ring officials.

Tony Marino

A new scale of fees ordered in force by the commission provides that in the future, referees officiating at shows in second-class cities shall receive a stipend of only $25 instead of $50, as heretofore, and judges have been cut from $25 to $15.

REED BROWN, manager of Tony Marino, classy little Duquesne boxer and one of the best prospects uncovered hereabouts in many a day, declares that his boy is through fighting bantamweights. Tony, who decisively defeated Marty Gold at Jim McGirr's club in McKeesport Thursday night, is a natural flyweight, according to Brown, making the class limit of 112 pounds with ease, whereas, some of the boys he has fought, like Gold, came in scaling 118 at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and by fight time probably were weighing somewhere around 122 or 123. The extra weight that Tony has to put on in order to bring himself up to 115 steals a little of his speed. "From now on, it's flyweights or sub-flyweights for my little coming champion," Brown announces.*

By CARL W. SHATTO

The Cleveland Indians will be out to settle an old score with the Yellow Jackets when they meet the local skaters in an International Hockey League game in Cleveland tonight.

Last New Year's Eve, the Indians had a police escort when they quit this city after a battle with the Reidmen at Duquesne Garden, and the escort wasn't provided because the Indians were conquering heroes, for they lost an overtime fray to the Jackets that night.

The joust was interrupted by fist fights in which both players and fans participated. A wild night, indeed! It possibly is just as well that tonight's duel will terminate the locals' league activity until next Thursday.

OUT TO HELP SYRACUSE

At that, Cleveland and Pittsburgh tonight will be working for a common cause—that of helping the Syracuse Stars to clamber out of the cellar. Each team is just one point removed from last place. By winning, the Jackets can do much toward shoving the Indians down beneath the Stars. Coach Charley Reid is aware of the fact that the Indians have the same idea in mind—the same, that is, except that they propose to have the Jackets take the thumping.

Despite the Jackets' recent slump, the Indians are not likely to find the Reidmen an easy mark. While Pittsburgh was losing to Syracuse here Thursday the front line combination of Doc Romnes at pivot, Earl Miller at left wing and Cliff Barton at right wing gave the dark clouds a silver lining by flashing a world of class and power.

LEO REISE RECALLED

Leo Reise, right defense player, who played a star role as the Jackets rode into the play-offs last season, will join the Jackets in Cleveland tonight to share backfield duties with Joe Matte. Coach Reid announced that Reise had been called into the fold from Bradford, Ont. His appearance in the Cleveland game hinges on his ability to get through the customs and immigration offices in Buffalo in 15 minutes.

Today, just before leaving for the Ohio city, Coach Reid said that he would continue to use Gregg, Fields and Proudlock as his starting forwards. He said that Eddie Rodden, who recently has been well below his best form, will be benched, and that Norman Locking will be sent in at center on the third line. Locking will be flanked by Arbour and Dunning.

W... DSOR DEFEATE

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 23.—(AP.)—Gene Carrigan and Leo Quenneville got together for two goals in the third period last night and gave the London Tecumsehs a 4-to-2 victory over the Windsor Bulldogs in an exciting International League hockey game.

Pitt's annual meeting with Notre Dame at South Bend and the Geneva-Bethany Tri-State Conference battle at Beaver Falls head tonight's comparatively light college basketball card of interest to the boys of this district.

The Panthers won both games played with Notre Dame last year, topping both decisions after extra-period tussles. After slouching along in a slump for a period of four games, the Panthers snapped out of it with a vengeance Wednesday night to annihilate Tech, and will be on edge for the Irish tonight.

Geneva, beaten by Westminster and victor over Waynesburg in conference clashes earlier in the week, hopes to take the Bisons tonight and finish above the .500 mark for the week.

TECH VICTOR

In other games Westminster invades Cleveland to meet John Carroll; Indiana and Slippery Rock play at Slippery Rock and Davis-Elkins meets Shepherd College at Shepherdstown, Md.

Carnegie Tech's self-satisfaction has been somewhat restored today by virtue of the return to the victory column of its varsity basketball team. The Tartan tossers defeated Western Reserve, of Cleveland, last night by a 10-point margin at 32-22, and even though Coach Hogan used a very much mixed-up lineup, the Skibos at no time looked overly impressive.

It may have been because of the very fact that Hogan elected to start his second team, or most of 'em, and to keep his lineup in a constant state of uncertainty, that the Tartans failed to impress. Reserve didn't look any too hot, either, and after getting off to a 6-0 lead, permitted the Skibos to creep up to an even basis, slip past and then stay put in front for the remainder of the ball game.

JAGNOW PLAYS

Hogan elected to gamble by using his injured forward star, Lou Jagnow, who was held out of the important N. Y. U. and Pitt engagements, in last night's affair. Jagnow went into the action in the second half, quite as a surprise, as Hogan had informed Graduate Manager Buddy Overend that he intended using only second stringers against Reserve. Clever Lou dumped a pair of field goals, one a pip, tossed from far out on the court, and came out

BASS TO BOX AT GARDEN

By HARRY KEUCK
Sports Editor.

Benny Bass, of Philadelphia, former world junior-lightweight champion, who recently lost that title to Kid Chocolate, will appear in a bout with Frankie Bojarski, of Erie, in Motor Square Garden on Monday, February 15, it was learned from Philadelphia today.

The battle will mark the second appearance of Bass in the Pittsburgh district. He boxed Steve Smith in the main bout of the opening show in the Meyers Bowl, North Braddock, three summers ago.

There will be no boxing card at the Garden next Monday night because of the automobile show, Tuesday, February 2, being the next boxing date in the East End arena. Jimmy Belmont, Ted Yarosz and Tony Galento all are being considered for the main bout of this program.

Promoter Apples Meyers reports lively interest and a good advance order for seats for his reopening show in the Moose Temple next Tuesday night, with Tiger Joe West, local middleweight, and Paul Pirrone, of Cleveland, appearing in the main bout, in return engagement. Other features of the card are the return of Tom Malco, of Soho, following a long layoff, to box Roger Brooks, of Cleveland, in the semi-final, and the turning professional of Max Elling, of the Hill, against Nick Susnell, Rochester (Pa.), veteran, in the opener.

Amateur and professional boxers and wrestlers and other entertainers will participate in a testimonial show for the Rev. John Graney, of St. Titus Church, in Bonnecamp Hall, Aliquippa, tonight. Mose Butch, Tiger Joe Randall, Willie Davies and Jimmy Belmont are among the pros scheduled to appear under the auspices of Promoter Ray Eberle.

SCHOOL TO GET TROPHY

The Bucknell Alumni Club of Western Pennsylvania football trophy will be awarded the Mt. Lebanon High School at a dinner to be given Principal I. E. Perry, Coach Henry J. Leucht and Jay Wills, captain of the 1931 team in the University Club tonight.

PAPERS SIGNED FOR TITLE GO

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—(AP.)—Max Schmeling, heavyweight champion, and Jack Sharkey, Boston challenger, who has been waiting almost two years for his "revenge," officially signed articles last night for a 15-round title bout here in June.

Although no definite date yet has been picked, it was believed Thursday, June 16, would be selected.

Sharkey and Schmeling posed for photographs with pens in their hands, while the managers signed the papers.

The articles call for a 15-round bout, the date to be set within 60 days, in "Greater New York." Madison Square Garden, promoting the match, secured an option on Sharkey's services for one title defense. Probably next September, in case the Boston Sailor defeated Schmeling. The German was bound for this fight alone.

Schmeling was announced as receiving 37½ per cent, Sharkey 12½, which are the champion's and challenger's shares, respectively, of gate receipts under the rules of New York State Athletic Commission.

Schmeling immediately departed to set sail for Germany at midnight on the Europa. He will return in March to start training.

Moore, Al Brown Barred by Comish

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 23.—(AP.)—Two boxers were indefinitely suspended and two others with two wrestlers were reinstated yesterday by the State Athletic Commission.

Jimmy Moore, of Pittsburgh, was suspended for unsatisfactory services in a fight at McKeesport, Pa., on January 14, and Jackie Willis, of Philadelphia, for failure to honor a contract.

Al Brown, boxer, of Panama, who is ill, was declared ineligible indefinitely for failure to honor a contract with the Motor Square Garden, Pittsburgh.

Those reinstated included Lloyd Clements, boxer, Jeannette, Pa.

Former Gob Mitt Champ, Original Hard Luck Guy

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Jan. 23.—(AP.)—Oscar F. Tucker, former middleweight wrestling champion in the Navy, is the original "hard luck guy."

He hitch-hiked here from Norfolk, Va., to re-enlist in the Navy, but found rides hard to snag in bad weather in Texas, and arrived one day too late.

When he went to the recruiting office yesterday, the recruiting officer looked up his record and found that Tucker had become 35 years old Thursday.

"One day over the age limit."

POLO LEAGUE PLAY BEGINS

The schedule of the Pittsburgh Polo League gets under way tonight with a game between the Vangs and Shady Side Academy in the Hunt Armory. Play will begin at 8:30.

Tonight's game will be the first of the season here to be played under the rules of the United States Indoor Polo Association, with official handicaps prevailing.

Gil Hall to Battle Bell in Final Today

MONTREAL, Jan. 23.—(AP.)—J. Gilbert Hall, South Orange, N. J., and Berkeley Bell meet in an all-United States final for the Canadian covered court tennis championship today.

Hall yesterday defeated George M. Lott, Jr., of Chicago, Davis Cup player and four-times holder of the Canadian indoor title in a five-set semi-final, 12-10, 2-6, 6-3, 3-6, 6-3.

W. VA. TO MEET NAVY

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Jan. 23.—(AP.)—West Virginia University's cross country team is to meet Navy in Morgantown, November 5. The race will be staged in connection with the West Virginia-Georgetown football game.

DAWSON BACK WITH BUCS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Joe Dawson, former righthander pitcher of the Pittsburgh Pirates, who retired in July of the 1929 pennant race to take up commercial aviation here, has been granted his reinstatement by Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis and will leave with the first Pirate squad for the training camp at Paso Robles, Cal.

The announcement of his reinstatement was made today by William E. Benswanger, treasurer of the Pirates.

BRAME, FRENCH HOLDOUTS

Ervin Brame and Larry French, Pirate star hurlers, have been added to the Bucs' rebellious list, both having announced they are dissatisfied with the figures on their 1932 contracts. From Hopkinsville, Ky., last night, Brame issued the following statement:

"They offered me a contract for a 12 per cent cut. I will not consider such a slash at this time."

Brame and his wife, whom he married last year, live on a farm near Edgeton, Ky.

The addition of this pair raises the Pirate holdout list to three. Lloyd Waner, having announced he would not sign several days ago. Gus Suhr was said to be ready to sign with a $500 salary cut, according to reports from San Francisco.

FREDERICK HOLDS OUT

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 23.—(AP.)—Johnny Frederick, Brooklyn outfielder, said yesterday he was returning his 1932 contract unsigned. Frederick said he did not want to be considered a holdout, but the contract called for a larger salary cut than he had expected. He would not say what the reduction was, but said he believed he and the club management would have no trouble "getting together."

DUKES TILT OFF

The Georgetown University-Duquesne football game, scheduled for Friday night, October 28, at Forbes Field, has been canceled.

DUBUQUE RITES ON MONDAY

By TOM BIRKS

Funeral services for Armar... Dubuque, former star pitcher of the North Side Buicks in the City League, who died at the home of his cousin, Paul Luzale, on Mt. Nebo road, will be held at the home of his parents at Pawtucket, R. I., on Monday afternoon.

Dubuque went to the North Siders last season. Manager Johnny Dunsky signed him after he returned from the Piedmont League, following a salary argument. He was the property of the Winston-Salem club, but after getting away to a good start in the City loop, quit the team halfway through the season.

He was getting into condition for the 1932 season last Tuesday, working out on the Lowries Run road lot, and died on Thursday from double pneumonia. He made many friends in the City League and will be missed by the Wilson Park fans.

LAYTON BOWS TO WESTHUS

CHICAGO, Jan. 23.—(AP.)—Bud Westhus, former St. Louis University football player, contributed the biggest upset of the world three-cushion billiards championship tournament yesterday and reduced the field of undefeated entrants to three by defeating Johnny Layton, of Sedalia, Mo., 50 to 46, in 82 innings.

Len Kenney, Chicago, turned back Allen Hall, of Chicago, 50 to 38, in 54 innings.

Gus Copulos, of Eugene, Ore., handed the defending champion, Arthur Thurnblad, of Chicago, a 50 to 27 beating in 41 innings.

Otto Reiselt, of Philadelphia, kept his record clear by defeating Tiff Denton, of Kansas City, 50 to 47, in 69 innings.

COUNTY PARKS GET DIAMONDS

SANDLOT CLUBS TO USE NEW FIELDS

The situation baseball-wise in Greater Pittsburgh long deferred appears to be headed for a battle royal judging by developments centered at North and South parks, the two vast playgrounds which Allegheny County has acquired for its citizens.

At a meeting yesterday between prominent baseball men and Park Director Rial, director of the Bureau of Parks, steps were taken to have the concrete diamond plans already laid by the park officials and by the park officials. Director Rial it was agreed, sympathetic toward the amateur baseball player as well as toward boys and girls who take part in other sports.

Rial plans the construction of many diamonds in both parks. North Park on account of its better terrain is likely to be favored with the greater number of baseball layouts although South Park will have several diamonds.

The director of parks is so eager to give the large army of baseball boys a square deal, he will insist on real playing fields with the fences far removed from the home plate.

Honus Wagner, premier of baseball performers, attended the session for the purpose of advising Director Rial. A warm friend of the sandlot player, the Flying Dutchman praised Rial for his efforts to promote better amateur baseball in the Pittsburgh district.

William S. Haddock, president of the Greater Pittsburgh Baseball Commission, also lauded the efforts of the park director.

Ed F. Ballinger, Fred Wetterhahn, Charles J. Doyle, local big league baseball writers, also took part in the session. The meeting was held in Director Rial's office at South Park.

TRAPPING BALL

Donnelli trapping the ball into position for a kick. He does probably more direct kicking and less trapping than any other district player, but he is proficient in the art.

Buff Donnelli, former star of the Heidelberg team, national amateur soccer champions, and also former Duquesne University football star, will be the center of interest in the semi-final round battle for the West Penn championship at South Park tomorrow. Union Switch and Signal, of Swissvale, will meet the winner in the final round. Donnelli is the ace scorer of the district and seldom is held effectively in check.

YAROSZ WINS OVER HILL

DETROIT, Jan. 23.—(AP)—Joe Yarosz of Monaca, Pa., won a fast 10-round bout from Jimmy Hill, Philadelphia Islands here last night. Yarosz weighed 148, Hill 144.

Hill, who got up off the floor two weeks ago in a preliminary bout to stop his opponent in one punch, was a big favorite to win from the Monaca youngster, but Yarosz upset the dope by taking an edge in every round.

BOJARSKI BEATS DEVINE

ERIE, Pa., Jan. 23.—Frankie Bojarski, slugging southpaw, came back in great shape here last night to punish out a decision over Harry Devine, Worcester, Mass., in a grueling 10-round bout. Devine gained the nod over Bojarski in the local ring two weeks ago.

The Erie, Pa., lad had set the pace from the start, and while Devine proved the smarter boxer, he could not match the local boy's hard punching. Devine was down for the count in the second round, a left crashing him flush on the jaw. It was the only knockdown of the fight.

Bojarski centered his attack on Devine's body during the early rounds, then switched to the head and had Harry's right eye cut and nearly closed at the finish. Devine staged a plucky finish, slugging it out with the rugged farmer boy during the last two rounds, but could not overcome the early lead amassed by Bojarski. Bojarski weighed 133, Devine 136½.

PITT BATTLES NOTRE DAME

of the engagement none the worse for wear and tear.

After Reserve had hopped into the lead with a 6-0 lead the Tartan starting lineup, composed of Red Silverman, Capt. Jimmy Leonard at the forwards, Edelblut at center and Seigal and Raudabaugh at the guards, kept plugging along until Capt. Jim tied the count when he sank a brace of fouls. The score then read 8-all.

On the next play, almost, Silverman put his team ahead, once and for all, by popping one from outside and from then on in during the remainder of the initial half and throughout the second, Carnegie remained out in front.

Jagnow, Edelblut, Friedel and Smith led Tech's second half attack with Red Himself Ferguson stepping into the picture with a preposterous shot that caused even the great Red to cover his face. He tossed one overhead, backhand and with reverse English that nine times out of 10 would have gone smack into the mid attendance.

LEONARD GOES WELL

Considering the fact that the Tartans scarcely had time to recover from the shock of the Pitt defeat, the boys stepped along in pretty nifty fashion. Silverman and Seigal both played heading ball, as did Leonard, the Skibo captain who ever seems to be on his well-known footsies.

For Reserve, Eddie Finnigan, the guard who also plays a neat game of football, led the scoring with eight points secured with a field goal and six fouls. Bernald, the Red Cat center, accounted for three goals from the floor, the greatest number of the evening. Silverman, Edelblut, Jagnow and Smith had two each for Tech. Bernardic dumped a brace for Reserve. The lineup:

WE NOW PRESENT

TOM GERUN, husky orchestra maestro whom we mistook once at Pirate Hall for Jesse Quatse, the all-America tackle at Pitt, sends a greeting to his Pittsburgh public tonight at 10 o'clock over WCAE, direct from his cabaret in San Francisco . . Question a Day:

A friend of mine and I agree that Mildred Bailey is the best blues singer on the air with her plaintive tones but he does not believe me when I tell him she is white. Will you please reassure him?

Answer—Contrary to a published report, Miss Bailey is decidedly white. And you're right in saying she's among the very best of the singers.

Have Color in Cheeks

If your skin is yellow—complexion pallid—tongue coated—appetite poor—you have a bad taste in your mouth—a lazy, no-good feeling—you should try Olive Tablets.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets — a substitute for calomel—were prepared by Dr. Edwards after 20 years of study.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound. Know them by their olive color.

To have a clear, pink skin, bright eyes, no pimples, a feeling of buoyancy like childhood days, you must get at the cause.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets act on the liver and bowels like calomel—yet have no dangerous after effects.

They start the bile and help overcome constipation. Take nightly and note the pleasing results. Millions of boxes sold yearly. 15c, 30c, 60c.

MUSCULAR—RHEUMATIC PAINS

DRAW them out with a "counter-irritant." Muscular lumbago, soreness and stiffness—generally respond to good old Musterole. Doctors call it a "counter-irritant" because its warming action penetrates and stimulates blood circulation and helps to draw out infection and pain. It gets action and is not just a salve. But do not stop with one application. Apply this soothing, cooling, healing ointment generously to the affected area once every hour for five hours. Used by millions for over 20 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. All druggists.

To Mothers—Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

Members of Belmonte's Gang Intimidate Witness in Murder Case

(Adapted from the original motion picture story of W. R. Burnett with screen play by John L. Mahin; produced by Cosmopolitan Productions and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.)

CHAPTER XV.

Mary was getting worried about Jim. He would come home in the evenings, sit around glumly gazing into the fireplace or listlessly reading the newspaper, and say nothing. He looked 10 years older and his usual vigorous buoyancy had been supplanted by a morose melancholy. She carefully avoided any reference to Ed because she knew that once Jim's conscience had made up his mind no persuasion could change him.

Mickey had been taken out of school on the day the newspapers announced Ed's guilt and no reference was made at home about his uncle. But he sensed something in the air, and of evenings would play quietly in the corner with his toys, now and then stealing a glance at his father. . . .

But on this day he had been allowed to go to the grocery store and he had hardly gotten outside the house before some small boys began to jeer him.

"Look-it! His uncle's a bandit!" cried one.

"Yeah. He killed a policemans and a little girl," cried a second.

"Taint so!" hotly replied Mickey. "My Uncle Ed ain't no bandit and he didn't kill nobody."

"His uncle is a bandit," jeered the little savages in sing-song chorus. Tears spurted from Mickey's eyes and he doubled up his little fists.

"I'll fight anybody who says my uncle's a bandit!" he exclaimed. One of the little boys approached and clowned in his face.

"Well, it's so—my father said it was so!" he said.

"My father can lick your father," insisted Mickey belligerently.

"Can't neither."

"Yes he can—he can lick anybody," and Mickey spat contemptuously on the sidewalk.

"But your uncle's in jail—and he can't lick nobody!" cried the other in barbaric treble.

"Take that back!" shouted Mickey, lowering his head and beginning to thrash his arms in the direction of his youthful baiter.

The two little boys fought closely, with muttered venom, hitting blindly, while the others clossed around shouting gleefully.

"Give it to 'im, Jimmy!"

"Sock him in the nose!"

Blood was streaming down Mickey's face, causing the other little boys to jeer gloatingly and shout in notes of joy like songs of triumphant cruelty. But Mickey was game. He tripped his assailant and tumbled on top of him and began to pummel his face.

"Y'take that back? Y'got enough?" he cried.

Their champion down, the other little boys fled at a respectful distance and continued their taunts. But Mickey continued to beat his foe.

"Nuff!" cried the little fellow on the bottom, finally. "I didn't mean it, Mickey—honest!"

Mickey got up, still bristling. One eye was swollen and his face was bloody and dirty. But he glared in the direction of the other children.

"Come on!" he screamed. "I can lick any of 'yeh who says my uncle is a bandit!"

But none dared venture near him and they stood silently while the vanquished one slowly got to his feet, weeping and rubbing his distorted face. He shuffled away and when he joined the others he turned and shouted:

"Your uncle is a bandit!"

Mickey started in pursuit, but the tormentors scattered. So Mickey went home. When his mother saw him, his little sanguine face grim and determined, she threw up her hands.

"What in the world has happened, Mickey?" she exclaimed. "You been fighting?"

"That Jimmy Gallagher and those other fellers said my Uncle Ed was a bandit and I licked him," he muttered.

Mary stooped down and took him in her arms and pressed his blood-begrimed face to hers. Tears came in her eyes and her voice trembled.

"Don't—don't you believe them, Mickey," she said. "Now come on and get cleaned up. Your father's going to be mad when he finds out you've been fighting."

"Well, nobody can say that about my Uncle Ed!" hotly protested Mickey.

"Now, don't say a word to your father about this," warned Mary, and she led Mickey toward the bathroom.

Two dudish figures in pinch-backed overcoats, derby hats and spats—two young men who might have been a vaudeville team on the small time—sauntered into the little cigar store in Lewis street. Sam Grossman, the proprietor, was busy opening up several boxes in the rear. He came forward solicitously.

"Gimme a cigar," said one of the young men.

"Same for me," said the other.

Sam flipped open the case and reached in to take out the box which one of the young men indicated. He fumbled with it, drew it out and sat it on the counter. The two young men leisurely helped themselves. They bit off the ends, lighted the cigars and lolled against the small cigar case.

"Looks like rain," said one.

"Yeah, don't look so good," said the other.

The first drew out a roll of bills and took off a 10-spot and placed it on the glass counter. Sam looked at it and shook his head.

"Nothin' smaller?" he asked. The young man leaned over the counter and looked at him steadily.

"Was it you was here a week ago when there was a little shootin' in the street?" he asked, blowing the smoke directly into Sam's face.

"Yes, yes. I was—when those two fellers killed that cop and little girl—I sure was—and I saw them," Sam became enthusiastic.

"Can you beat that?" asked the young man of the other. "Can you beat that?" he was around.

"Can you beat it?" queried the other indifferently, puffing away on his cigar.

"Yes, and I can point them out—I'd know them anywhere," continued Sam. "I identified them at police headquarters."

The first young man straightened up and looked around the place, from ceiling to floor.

"Yeh got a nice place here," he ventured, in the same evenly modulated voice.

"Oh, yes—it's nice—but things are slow," said Sam.

"But yeh make a livin' an' nobody bothers yeh?" asked the first young man.

"Oh, yes I make a livin'—just do. No, nobody bothers me—what do you mean?"

"Oh, nothin'—but yeh're sure yeh could identify those fellers?"

"Sure—sure. I couldn't mistake them."

The first young man suddenly reached over and caught the proprietor's arm. There was a leer on his face.

"Ye're gettin' along all right, ain't yeh?" he asked earnestly. "Yeh don't want no trouble, do yeh? Yeh got a wife an' kids and yeh don' want no trouble?"

His hand closed tightly on the other's arm. Sam winced and terror came in his eyes.

ALL IN A DAY

By MARK HELLINGER

Unsung New Yorkers

YOU'VE MET a girl like Mamie Smith. You must have. There's a Mamie in every large office in any city in the world. You know the type of woman. Not too pretty. Looks older than she is. A good worker, but a dull character. The kind of dame who's always the patsy in any organization.

Well, let's forget the Mamies you know for a moment and consider the one in this particular story. This girl was probably the most superstitious person you have ever encountered. She would spend nights at home completing chain letters. Anything that had to do with 13 would cause her to shiver with fear.

When the girls in the office sat around during a lunch hour, you could always depend on Mamie for an observation that would bring a howl from her co-workers. It made no difference about what they were talking. If one girl said she had seen Buddy Rogers on Broadway or another asserted that the new shade would undoubtedly be Spanish tile, Mamie would suddenly slip into the conversation.

"On the way to the office this morning," she would say, "I saw an awful thing. There was a man painting a sign over that French restaurant on the corner and I saw two people walk right under the ladder as though it didn't mean a thing. I hope nothing too terrible happens to them." . . .

Ethel was the office comedian. You'll find dopes such as her around practically any office, too. And it's a toss-up which is the worst pest, the Mamie or the Ethel. Ethel enjoyed all kinds of practical jokes. She was full of wise cracks, and the things she said about the bosses had the other girls in hysterics. She even put soap that turns the hands black in the chief's washroom one day. Ho, ho. Ethel was a card, all right. A deuce of spades.

It was only natural, I suppose, that Mamie looked up to Ethel as though the latter girl was something of a goddess. Seen through her eyes, Ethel was the very essence of everything that was witty and gay. She was so alive, so keen-witted, so pretty. She had everything, in other words, that Mamie lacked. And she hung on to Ethel's every word and gesture as though they were pearls that were not to be missed.

One bright morning Ethel hit upon a plan. A brilliant thing, really, and one that would permit them to have any amount of fun at Mamie's expense. She took two or three of her pals into her confidence.

"Look," she explained. "Mamie is absolutely crazy about anything that has to do with superstition. I've got an idea that will make her fall easily. And we'll have more laughs with her than we ever had before.

"I've got a friend who'll be only too glad to pose as a fortune-teller for us. She looks kind of weird and it'll be easy for her to put a shawl around her head and pose as a gypsy. Mamie'll go for that in a big way.

"While we're all sitting around, we'll have her tell Mamie all about herself. We'll tell her all about it, of course, before we ever bring Mamie into the room. But Mamie won't know that. She'll think she's really listening to something wonderful. And the only trouble we'll have will be in keeping our faces straight.

"Tell you what else we'll do. We can carry the joke on indefinitely by throwing a real scare into her. We can have the gypsy fortune teller advise her that someone she knows well is going to die soon. Or something like that. I'll figure it all out. How does it strike you?"

Two of the girls weren't so hot about the idea. They pointed out that Mamie was such a harmless kid that it seemed a shame to hurt her. But Ethel—good, old Ethel!—laughed away their qualms. And all of them finally agreed . . .

In a few days, everything was arranged. A few of the girls, including Ethel and Mamie, sat in front of the "fortune-teller," who had made up for the occasion. All fortune-tellers are phony, of course. But this one looked just a little sillier than the rest.

But how was Mamie to know that? The girl was getting pretty much of a thrill. This wonderful gypsy woman was telling her things that very few people knew. She had even told her her correct name, her birthday and the exact address at which she lived! It was all very fantastic to her simple brain. And, as Ethel had warned them, the other girls had a very tough job to keep from laughing.

Finally came the big kick of the evening. The fortune-teller leaned forward and gazed into a gilt ball that Ethel had bought in the five-and-ten that afternoon.

"Mamie," she murmured, "I tell you this because it is best for you to be forewarned. I see in the sacred crystal that someone close to you will die very soon. Only by one continued action can you avoid this death.

"Every morning when you get to your office you must read the obituary notices. This you must do without fail. Because, on the first day you miss, that will be the day on which the death will occur. Do you understand?

Mamie begged for more information. Who would it be? Her father? Her mother? Her older brother? Who? But the fortune teller would say no more. And the girl left. Most of them felt that that death thing was a little too strong. But once again Ethel told them not to be silly.

"Just watch her every morning in the office from now on," she laughed. "We'll all have plenty of fun". . .

And they did, too. Mamie was a panic. She would hurry to her desk and reach for the obituary column. She would read through it without a stop and then put it down with an expression of relief. Best of all it was a joke that could go on indefinitely. Week after week, month after month, the jest was highly successful.

But Mamie was growing thinner. This thing was preying on her mind. She was obsessed with the thought that someone close to her was going to die, and that the dreaded event would happen unless she read the obituaries faithfully every morning. Finally, one of the more sensible girls around the office went to Mamie. She told her frankly that the entire thing was a joke and that Mamie should stop worrying. Mamie would not have it that way.

"I know what you're doing," she said. "You're just trying to be nice to me. But please don't. I know the fortune teller was telling the truth". . . .

About a month later Mamie failed to arrive at the office. Ethel was in early and, for a laugh, Ethel went through the other girl's usual routine. She mimicked Mamie's rather halting walk, strolled to Mamie's desk, and opened the paper to the obituary news. It was all very funny.

A moment later Ethel fell to the floor in a faint. Mamie wouldn't read the death notices that morning. Because in the column was the name Mamie Smith. . . . .

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS Junior Komic Club

The Warner neighborhood theaters were filled to capacity this morning at the meetings of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theater Junior Komic Club meetings. As the hour for the meeting approached, auto loads of children began to arrive. The grown-ups who brought them have learned that these Saturday meetings are well worth attending.

The opening ceremonies over, each chapter has its own program. There is usually a speaker of interest, a feature act, and a little revue by the members of the club.

DAVIS CHAPTER

The bill at the Davis Chapter today consisted of six numbers put on by children who are studying at the M. Barth School of Dancing. On the program were Miriam Perlstine, who is making a name for herself as a mistress of ceremonies; Erney Alvin, Louise Foley, Betty Jane Franz, Pois Perlman and Katherine B. Dublin.

Since the organization of the Junior Komic Club, several chapters have assembled their own bands. Cameraphone chapter was the first to have a complete ensemble. State Chapter (Washington) ran a close second. Schenley Chapter's band is nearly completed and will soon parade through the streets of Oakland before the meetings. Mt. Oliver has a nucleus of one saxaphone, two cornets and a trombone. Other instruments will be added to the band each week until the group is complete.

Contests, stage shows and surprise features preceded the picture program of the day at the Arsenal, Belmar, Cameraphone, Davis, Harris (Etna); Kenyon, Manor, Mt. Oliver, Harris, Plaza, Rowland, South Hills, Schenley, State (Washington), Prince (Ambridge), Grand (Greensburg) and Memorial (McKeesport).

SHE WENT OUT OF HER WAY TO PAY FOR THE LUNCH TODAY, AND WHEN SHE OPENED HER PURSE, LET IT FALL TOWARD ME SO I'D SEE IT WAS STUFFED FULL OF MONEY.
I CAN'T IMAGINE WHAT HAPPENED. A MONTH AGO HE WAS SHOPPING AROUND FOR A HALL BIG ENOUGH TO HOLD ALL THE PEOPLE HE EXPECTED AT A CREDITORS MEETING
NAOMI CERTAINLY DIDN'T LOOK DESPONDENT. SHE EVEN MENTIONED THE MONEY FRED OWES YOU AND FISHED A GOLD PENCIL WITH A BIG DIAMOND IN THE TOP OF IT OUT OF HER HANDBAG TO JOT DOWN A NOTE FOR FRED TO SEND IT TO YOU
REMINDING HIM WHAT HE OWES ME IS A WASTE OF TIME. I'VE BEEN DOING THAT FOR YEARS
THE ONLY WAY I CAN FIGURE OUT THEIR PROSPERITY IS THAT FRED HAS DISCOVERED ANOTHER STORE WHERE THE PROPRIETOR USES A PAIR OF DICE FOR A CREDIT SYSTEM.
FOUR YEARS AGO I GAVE HER ONE OF MY OLD COATS AND TODAY SHE GOT HER REVENGE. EVERY TIME SHE MENTIONED THE WORD MONEY SHE ROLLED HER EYES AT MY COAT WHICH LOOKS AS THOUGH IT WAS MADE OUT OF A LOT OF OLD DOOR-MATS.

Prefers love to a million dollars,

She'd have a perfect love affair,

The Struggle Against Unfair Coal Rates Must Go on. Brief Comment on Local News.

Overruled again in their effort to obtain a wider spread between the freight rates on coal shipped from Pittsburgh to the Great Lakes and the rates on shipments to the lakes from the southern fields, the local coal operators announce that the fight will go on. Since justice, despite the Interstate Commerce Commission decisions, is manifestly on Pittsburgh's side in this controvery, the "never say die" spirit surely will eventually bring victory.

There is good reason for continuing the campaign for a better differential on lake cargo coal in the fact that the Interstate Commerce Commission once went on record in favor of a 45 cent spread. Through a series of questionable maneuvers by the railroads the differential was soon put back to 35 cents, the present figure. The fact remains, however, that the Interstate Commerce Commission said it should be 45 cents.

*The crippling of Pittsburgh's coal trade, as Sena-*tor James J. Davis pointed out in his radio talk over WCAE, when interviewed by Mark Shields Thursday night, has injured the business of our stores, our mills and our factories. Better freight rates, by enabling the Pittsburgh operators to recover some of the valuable lake trade taken from them by Southern competitors, would benefit all branches of local industry and commerce.

Pending a satisfactory readjustment of freight rates the best hope of putting the bituminous coal industry back on its feet lies in legislation such as has been introduced by Senator Davis to stabilize the industry and eliminate the cut-throat competition which has brought so many of the operators to the verge of ruin. If the operators should be placed in position to make money, the miners' wages could be raised and the whole community would benefit.

It is to be feared that the argument between Prof. T. L. Smith, of Carnegie Institute of Technology and the Very Rev. J. J. Callahan, president of Duquesne University, over Father Callahan's parallel theory has gone over the heads of some of us. It is to be hoped that the effect will be to stimulate interest in pure mathematics, which it is obvious from the zest with which the two men discuss it is a fascinating study—for persons with keen minds.

A man found in a state of collapse on the street and taken by police to the Homestead Hospital was found by the hospital authorities to be suffering from starvation. Heaven forbid that other cases of destitution shall be allowed to reach that extreme! It is pitiful that this victim did not know of the Helping Hand and other social welfare agencies that stand ready to feed persons in desperate circumstances.

*The recent Federal Court ruling permitting prohi-*bition agents to confiscate the furnishings and equipment of speakeasies seems to have teeth in it, to judge from the list of things seized yesterday in an alleged bootlegging establishment in Tunnel street. With the rooms of a speakeasy stripped bare, it will not be so easy to resume operations immediately.

The decision authorizing confiscation of speakeasy fixtures is one which would easily lend itself to abuse in the hands of unscrupulous "drys." On the mere charge of a liquor law violation they might strip a home of its furnishings, making it uninhabitable, and so bring undeserved hardship on innocent occupants of the house. Careful watch will be necessary to restrain fanatical "drys" from persecuting people under cloak of this ruling.

The proprietor of two Webster avenue stores "shot up" by gangsters yesterday told police his places have been bombed three times in recent months. This is just another reminder of the burning necessity for a vigorous campaign against the gangs responsible for these outrages. It is obvious that the police themselves lack the skill to detect the bombers. But is there any reason why able detectives should not be employed?

Twenty-nine of the new homes in Chatham Village are open for public inspection today. This is one of the most interesting of the Buhl Foundation projects and one of which every Pittsburgher may well be proud. For, apart from the public service rendered in building finer homes for people of modest incomes, the Buhl Foundation has conferred benefit by transforming a rather unprepossessing tract of land into a beautiful residential park.

*The Pittsburgh Goodwill Industries, a non-sec-*tarian enterprise which uses waste material to give work to needy people, will formally dedicate their new building at Liberty avenue and Twenty-eighth street tomorrow. The community can take satisfaction from the acquisition of the new building, for the Goodwill Industries are a fine philanthropy and improved quarters will enable them to do better work.

The Goodwill Industries have as their motto "Not Charity but a Chance." They thus uphold a principle that it is important to preserve, the principle that destitution can best be dealt with by giving the unemployed jobs in preference to a dole, by offering the poor work-relief rather than direct relief. The Goodwill Industries deserve the support of the public in this laudable undertaking.

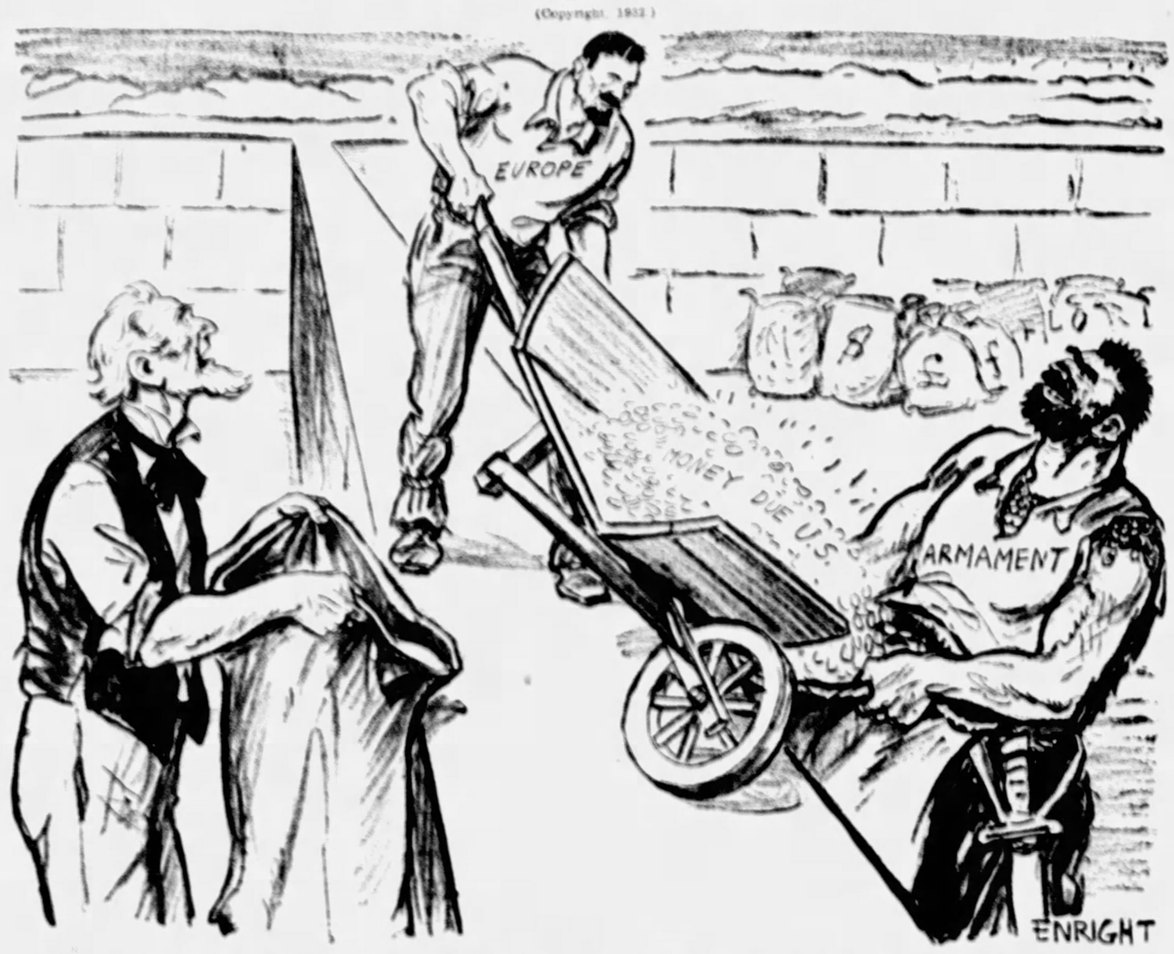
Tomorrow is the twentieth anniversary, the china wedding, of Jiggs and Maggie, hero and heroine of George McManus' famous funny, "Bringing Up Father." It would be interesting to know how many millions of people have laughed at the goings on of this pair during their two decades before the public. Their china wedding will be found pictured in an amusing way in the Sunday Sun-Telegraph's Comic Weekly.

The Gravure Section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph will be notable for a page of pictures of recent demonstrations given by the unemployed under the leadership of Father James R. Cox. A half-page is taken up by a photograph of the meeting at the Pitt Stadium; it is suitable for framing. Photographs of interesting babies and old-time pictures in the "Remember?" department will also be found entertaining.

*The first pictures ever printed, priceless old wood-*cuts of the Savior and saints, preserved in the University of Oxford, are reproduced in the American Weekly, section of the Sun-Telegraph. They will be published tomorrow for the first time since they were originally printed. Among the most interesting articles in the magazine is one telling of last year's queerest accidents.

Not Enough for Both!

(Copyright, 1932.)



Uncle, having been foolish enough to grant Europe a moratorium for one year on war debts, will continue to hold the empty sack for years and years, perhaps forever. European nations have made up their minds NOT to pay JUST debts to the United States Treasury, and find support for this course among our internationalists.

Whining inability to pay Uncle, Europe uncovers ample funds to increase military and naval establishments. European nations pleaded poverty when asked to pay us the $243,712,000 due this year, meanwhile SPENDING $1,779,346,162 ON ARMAMENT.

American taxpayers, to whose backs the $243,712,000 was shifted by the moratorium, will bear this in mind when internationalists plead for even more American participation in foreign affairs.

Are We Going Back To the Wallow?

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

It is reported from Washington that the President, who "is known to have felt that geographical considerations should govern the selection of Justice Holmes' successor," has about concluded "that the selection of a liberal is as important a factor as geography." This conversion to the right idea is credited by the correspondents to the fear that the naming of anyone not a liberal will mean the failure of the Senate to confirm. We hope this is true. The American people are not in the least concerned about geography in the matter.

The two outstanding liberals of the Supreme Court who have had the absolute confidence, and even affection, of millions, Holmes and Brandeis, come from the same state—Massachusetts.

In view of the common note struck by the comments of the national press on the resignation of Holmes it is astonishing that the President did not realize from the first that it is more important to name a liberal on social and economic matters than to consider geography in the selection.

If a reactionary is appointed the refusal of the Senate to confirm would meet with universal approval.

Senator Copeland's Interesting Reply

There was an interesting discussion in the Senate the other day, apropos of the debate on the amendment to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation bill to permit the loaning of money to municipalities that are rich and have a perfect reputation for meeting their obligations. The bill provides a fund of $2,000,000,000 from the people's Treasury to be loaned to financial institutions.

In opposing the amendment Senator Reed saw fit to slur New York City and Mayor Walker. Many will think Senator Copeland's reply interesting:

"It's no worse for Mayor Walker to ask help than for us to be giving aid to the Pennsylvania Railroad."

Senator Reed replied that he was not interested in the Pennsylvania Railroad so much as in the stockholders who bought stock to make money; and the answer might have been that there are more than 6,000,000 stockholders of the municipality of New York City; that almost a million are jobless; that hundreds of thousands of these are not worried so much about dividends as about bread; and that the whole burden of preventing starvation has been repudiated by the administration and put on the city.

* * *

'No One Shall Starve in America'

The taxing power of the Federal Government is to be used in the interest of private institutions. Senator Robinson made a sharp comment on that:

"It seems to us to be most inconsistent to say that it is sound and wise to use the Federal taxing power for the aid of private institutions, but neither sound nor wise to use it for public institutions."

Or it might be put in another way. Why is it sound and wise to go into the people's Treasury for money to aid money-making institutions, but vicious to go there to aid women and children who are hungry and starving?

The debate disclosed that New York City is not the only great municipality that is having difficulty in making loans through the regular banking channels. Boston has been refused loans by the banks, and so has Philadelphia.

It is no answer to charge that these municipalities have needlessly squandered money; for then the reply would be that all private businesses that are in distress have brought this condition upon themselves by unbusiness-like methods. Both private business and municipalities are the victims of a common cause.

And some, if not much, of the distress of the small governmental units is due to the obligation imposed upon them by the Administration at Washington to feed, clothe and give shelter to the unfortunate, or let them starve and die of exposure. They have done what the Federal Government has refused to do—tried to make sure that "no one shall starve in America."

* * *

Cities Can Do No More

Now most of them have reached the end of their resources and can do no more. And there are just as many starving children, just as many evictions from shelter, just as many jobless men in need of aid as ever.

If the smaller governmental units have reached the end of their resources; if the banks will not loan; if the federal government will not help; if, as appears to be the case, the contributions from individuals do not approach the need, we should like to know if these unfortunates are to be left to their fate by the richest country on the face of the globe.

The shocking thing is that there is a disposition to frown on such suggestions.

* * *

What of the Future!

Banks bulging with money; granaries choked with grain, and people starving! That is a condition that no amount of high-hat sophistry can possibly justify to humanity.

Seven or eight months ago there was a more intelligent and humane discussion of the weak points of our social and industrial system, and more of a disposition to face realities and make reforms, than there is today. Apparently we have settled down to working out a plan, if possible, to sustain the old system as far as the men at the top are concerned.

The wages of the workers are to be lowered, that the dividends may not be reduced; we are to have a deflation of the standard of living for the masses, but not for all the people, and the thought of reorganizing industry in the matter of working days and hours, and of insurance for real workers against disaster, for which they are not responsible, has been abandoned. The captains of industry and finance, who then were speaking of reforms have lost their voices.

This may work out temporarily, but what of the future?

* * *

Old-time Arrogance Has Returned

Archbishop Fumasoni-Biondi has pointed indirectly to the lack of vision in the present program:

"I am hoping the depression will induce American captains of industry, with their great business capacity and generosity, to apply their minds and their hearts to the economic problem. Let them concentrate on the establishment of a just, durable social order and they will go far toward bringing it into being . . . And failure would certainly be most dangerous to a democratic country like this."

There is no evidence that anything of this sort will be done or attempted. The most appalling change in the spirit of those who alone can act without governmental prodding has come during the last six months. A momentary fear of the Lord was put into the hearts of some of the financial dictators of America last Spring; today the old-time arrogance has returned. Never have they been more open in dictating to Government than at this hour.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Princess of Wails

Sometimes when I read the wails in the "heart balm" columns or tune in one of those laments for lost lovers over the radio, it seems as though "life is just a bowl of raspberries" for a girl these days.

* * *

What is the matter with these modern lovers? Are the men colder and more indifferent than they used to be—or are the girls merely easier to fool? Frankly, I think it is a little of both. The men are harder-hearted because the girls are softer-hearted—or possibly just softer-headed.

Woman is the weaker vessel—filled with imagination. And most of the heartaches in this world are caused by her tendency to take a man too seriously, and to credit him with a lot of beautiful, hidden emotions that aren't THERE. She is constantly attaching a wonder significance to something he has said or done, just as a "stunt." Or just for instance.

* * *

If he happens to call her up for a date, two evenings in succession, she jumps immediately at the conclusion that it is because he can't live without seeing her for 28 hours. Whereas, it may be simply because some "other girl" didn't happen to be at home.

* * *

If he seems quiet and melancholy, she promptly suspects that he is hiding a secret sorrow—whereas, it may be only a hangover from the night before. Or something he ate for luncheon.

* * *

If he fails to show up for a week, she lies awake nights, wondering what has happened; or what she could have said to "hurt him." Whereas, probably nothing has happened, but a few nice parties—or a new blonde in town. And she couldn't "hurt" him, unless she hit him with a sash-weight.

A woman pours her sentiment and emotions over everything, just as she pours maple syrup over a waffle. But, when she lets it slop over and magnify or glorify a man's most commonplace act and most casual kiss, she is making a fatal mistake.

* * *

Men are not naturally romantic or sentimental; and no woman can judge a man's emotions by her own. To a man, a girl is a girl. You date her. A kiss is a kiss. You take it. An evening is an evening. You amuse yourself.

* * *

When a man feels any really serious emotion for a woman, he is so surprised and embarrassed that he blurts it right out. And no girl can MISTAKE it!

* * *

But, girls will go right on deceiving themselves, and courting heartaches, until they discover that a man is a perfectly literal, simple-minded creature, with no complexes, no deep underlying nature, no subtle motives and mighty few hidden emotions.

* * *

Don't take a man too seriously—or you won't get a chance to take him at all. Why should the independent, level-headed, modern girl be so susceptible and "easy" that a simple creature like a man can turn her into the Princess of Wails?

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—For more than a year now I've been trying to get the hang of the bells around my dugout, but I give up. Whoever lived here before must have been bell conscious. They are hidden under the carpet, in various nooks and where not.

Give the dogs the run of the house at night and what have you? An Evening with the Swiss Bell Ringers, that's what you have. If we have company, one of the pooches is apt to squat under the piano and far off in the kitchen sounds a merry ting-a-ling. Then there is what I call the bull bell.

Open a certain closet door and it yanks a wire that touches off a sort of hand dinner bell. It's so realistic you begin drooling for a plate of soup right now. Open it twice and you can tear into a T-bone steak. And often in the middle of the night they all go off at once. The mice!

There goes one, now! That would be the one in the pantry. No, it isn't the pantry one. It has a ping and this one is more a pung. I must keep my head. Which bell is it anyway? O, I know. It is that silly little bell that rings when you lean up against the ice box.

Why does the ice man do his leaning here? He should deliver his ice and go his way. What right has he to pick this time of day—there is another buzz. It must be the front door. I can't see anyone today. I must write. Maybe I should write to Aunt Bella. Like fun I will.

Ring out ye bells! What was it Poe wrote about the bells, the bells, the bells. Am I balmy? No, I'm all right. I'm great. Nobody can hear bells all day and be entirely normal. It is like me on top of everything to run the typewriter carriage too far.

That tinkle was the typewriter bell. It doesn't fool me. I'll make it ring again. Now, I'm almost up to it. Well, I'm a son-of-a-gun! It wasn't the typewriter at all. It was some other bell. Do you suppose it was a ringing in my ears? Or bats in the belfry?

* * *

I don't feel well, anyway. Just keep talking, I'll be all right. Maybe you better stretch me out on the couch. That's it—feet in the air and head down. Now, I'm O. K. Too much excitement and one of the dizzy spells. Goody, goody, we got bells. There I go again! Somebody send for Norman Bel-Geddes. Do you want me belled to death? Don't stand grinning like a lot of apes. Headline: City Boy Gets Big Belling!

* * *

Who swung across the stage on a bell clapper and saved her lover? Don't tell me. I know—Mrs. Leslie Carter. See, my mind is all cleared up. I'm practically good as new. Lay out the tan vest, Cheevers, I'm just perfectly dandy. The pallor will soon go. I like to be pale and interesting like Helen Menken anyway. Wait until that red corpuscle gets working. There, sweethearts, is a bargain in corpuscles. He's the only one left. Old standby, I call him. No matter how low I sink, he's on the job. To the pumps men! See the blood surge through wan cheeks. Look at the veins throbbing in thin temples. Not too much pressure or the ears will be ringing again. That's better. Now fix the pillows and read from Frank Sullivan's new book. That is a person.

* * *

Thinking it over it would have been terrible to have a career wrecked by ding-donging bells. Ah, the phone! Mr. McTeague on the wire. One of the blue bells of Scotland. Not that. I must concentrate. Anything to keep my mind off bells and things. I'll hum—ta, ta, te, teeedle, dum—Take me back to the Carolines, you carrillonier. Whoa! Start again. Many brave hearts are asleep in the deep! Ship ahoy! Four bells! There's another spell coming on.

* * *

I'll be brave. Chins up. March like Beatrice Lillie used to. You know, Lady Peal. There I'm off again. Lady Peal—peals, bells. I don't care. Ring every dad-burned bell on the place. Buy out a bell store—buy out a couple and sneak in the chimes of Normandy to boot. Light fires on the hills. Sound tocsins. Whoops, maybe I'm a belled buzzard!

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Things not breaking so good?

Haven't found a job yet, perhaps? Or maybe sales are worse than ever?

And you're discouraged—yes? Just about ready to give up the ship? I know, stranger. I've been there myself. And there are days, right now, when I don't feel exactly like a set of chimes. This morning was one of them. Woke up in a spell of those what's-the-use blues. Sat around all humped up on myself like a molting canary. Then suddenly I thought of that Christmas Eve drive—

Some drive was that! Worst storm we've had on the coast in years . . . I'd been working in dizzy circles, all day. And at six, just when things got going their nastiest, I started out to drive 500 miles, to have Christmas breakfast with my mother.

Boy, oh boy! Did we have Weather!! Riding the sta'board end of a bucking broncho was a game of ring-around-a-rosey compared to tackling that spittin', snortin', squawling, mauling, heaving, roaring sunuva-gunuva night.

Darkness scrambled, splattered, into a purple and green whirlpool, splintered with fire. Wind heaving itself like an idiot all over the place. Clawing at the windshield . . . gibbering on the running board . . . swooping ahead, in gigantic scrambles, yelling until the blackness yammered and gagged . . . And, pouring through that, the sound of the rain. Rain—exploding! Spurting out of nothingness like a firehose. Rushing ahead in a solid, boiling wall with your searchlights battling against it, fumbling vainly to pierce it — suddenly the whole wave collapsing . . . falling back . . . flopping down upon you like a wet, black bat . . . like an enormous cat with clinging, blinding wings—

Darkness, wind, rain . . . all gone mad . . . all tangled together . . . all going nowhere together . . . going nowhere a million miles a minute . . . with you in the middle of it, somewhere, lost and not caring . . . You and other things. Rivers that had forgotten where they belonged . . . pouring themselves along regardless . . . rising over the running board . . . seeping through the door . . . spreading in a pool about your feet. Trees floating on the rivers. Cows swimming in the rivers. Chicken coops. A little, drenched bird clinging to the windshield like a moth.

Quite a night! Everything busted loose—"hell-bent for nowhere." Not a thing where it ought to be. Except—

EXCEPT THE CHRISTMAS TREES!

FOR—WOULD YOU BELIEVE IT?—ALONG EVERY ONE OF THOSE MAD FIVE HUNDRED MILES, THE CHRISTMAS TREE LIGHTS SHONE ON . . . BURNING, WITH NEVER A BREAK, THROUGH THE DARKNESS, THROUGH THE WIND AND THE RAIN—

Sometimes a burst of scarlet and purple and green as I battled through a town. Sometimes, as I wallowed across the plains or inched around a mountain, a small, white light in a sheep herder's cabin or the faint, shabby glow of a little tree in a shanty beside the tracks.

BUT NEVER ONCE WERE THEY LOST! ALWAYS THE LIGHTS WENT ON . . . SIGNALS IN THE DARKNESS THAT LOVE AND HOPE AND COURAGE BURNED STEADY, DESPITE THE STORM.

Discouraged, comrade? Blinded by the storm? Sick of a confusion that seems to lead nowhere, of a darkness that seems to have no dawn? I know! But steady! Something burns clear in the darkness . . . something stands firm in the storm. Always the lights go on! The lights of man's deep faith and friendliness and bravery. Millions of years of storm have not quenched them. Millions of years never will. Always THOSE lights will go on!

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Married life is a partnership—partner comes first.

With this in mind there should be mutual understanding and definite principles decided upon before marriage.

Man should be the head of the household to keep his self respect.

Woman should be the queen of the home to preserve its ideals.

Each with the interests of the others first in mind it is easier to come to a perfect unity of purpose and its fulfilment.

Children sanctify the home and keep the atmosphere sweeter, make sacrifice easier and hearts younger.

Children mean a threefold interest in home, church and civic life.

Home life is more perfectly balanced when full responsibility is recognized from the start.

Young persons before they marry should have set aside enough to pay for more than the bare necessities.

Through insurance or some other method of saving, young couples should provide against the time when there is likely to be unusual demands upon the family purse.

Such periods should not have the extra worry which comes with the realization of having bills that cannot be met when due.
